

Huntley Defies AFTRA Pickets; Appears on Newscast

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK — Chet Huntley went on the air last night with his 7 o'clock news report despite a strike by the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, whose members set up picket lines against the three television networks at 5 a.m. yesterday.

David Brinkley, the other half of the National Broadcasting Company newscasting team, remained away from his microphone in Washington because he would not cross a picket line.

Walter Cronkite, the Columbia Broadcasting System's top newscaster did not go on the air for his usual 7 o'clock half-hour show. He was replaced by Arnold Zenker, CBS program administration manager. On the American Broadcasting Company's evening news show, Peter Jennings was replaced by Darryl Griffith, the ABC producer in charge of the special events unit.

The 7 a.m. "Today" show on NBC, the first program affected, was replaced by a rerun on July 4, 1966. The "Tonight" show was a rerun of Dec. 9, 1966.

A number of soap operas on NBC and CBS also were not telecast. Otherwise, network operations were not drastically affected.

Huntley's decision to go on the air apparently resulted from some soul-searching. Earlier in the day NBC said that the Huntley-Brinkley Show would not go on. The news report is divided between Huntley in New York and Brinkley in Washington.

He appeared quite drawn on the program and, although he reported news of the strike, he made no mention of his part in the story.

The striking union deplored Huntley's action, saying that he was liable to suspension or even expulsion.

"I would hate that," Huntley said by telephone "but this is the end process of a 30-year conviction that AFTRA is not qualified to act as the bargaining agent for news broadcasters. I will not allow that conviction to cave in on a given night."

WEATHER
Warmer weather is in store for the area today as the high will be in the upper 50s. Low will be near 40. There will be cloudy skies but the probability of rain is near zero. Tomorrow will be windy with a chance of rain late in the evening. Winds are southeasterly at 15 to 25 mph. Yesterday's results: precipitation, .47 inches; river, 4.6 feet and rising; high temperature 55; low 35. Sunrise is at 6:05 a.m. and sunset 6:44 p.m.

PENNSYLVANIA
Justices of the peace once again are fighting for their jobs. This time, it's big. The constitutional reforms, nine in all, would eliminate or reduce their powers. In Warren County, there are 39 justices affected. Page One.

THE NATION
Senator Dodd of Connecticut will face some action from the Senate Ethics Committee and official sources said the committee will recommend he not be expelled but disciplined nonetheless. The senator has admitted to using funds from testimonial dinners for personal uses, as was charged last year by Washington columnists Jack Anderson and Drew Pearson. Page One.

Chet Huntley of the Huntley-Brinkley news team on NBC has defied the union representing television actors and newscasters. He said he disagrees with the union representation situation and will not change his mind in this strike. Most shows are being handled by executives or with reruns. No hope is seen for settlement until Saturday at the earliest. Page One.

And the television strike brings to New York City the possibility of an almost total news blackout. Gotham newspapers face a contract expiration date of midnight today. It appears almost certain that a strike will occur. Page One.

THE WORLD
Italian reaction to Pope Paul's encyclical message Tuesday was mixed. The message condemned capitalism as a solution to the problems of world poverty and despair. It advocated revolution in the case of tyranny. Moderate newspapers in Rome were respectful of the Pope but critical of his stand. Leftish and Communist newspapers carried front page editorials in support of his position. Page A-5.

In the Vietnam war, politics and scattered fighting again dominated the major developments list. In the political arena, a civilian has challenged the military government in preparation for the elections. In the war, South Vietnamese troops are holding several hostages from a Viet Cong-controlled village in hopes that 15 kidnaped militiamen dependents are released. Page A-8.

For a change of pace, there is one basketball coach who is paid to lose games. He is Red Klotz, whose teams for the past 17 years have been the nightly opponents for the Harlem Globetrotters. In the 2,130 games his team has played they have won only 10. Their longest winning streak is two games in a row. Page A10.

The University of Illinois made it official yesterday. They have announced the hiring of Jim Valer as head football coach and Harry Schmidt as basketball mentor. They replace Pete Elliott and Harry Combes who quit after an investigation into a slush fund at the school. Both of the new coaches are graduates of Illinois. Page A9.

Teamsters Linked To Cosa Nostra

By FRED P. GRAHAM
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — The chief of the federal government's organized crime unit charged yesterday that the Teamsters Union and east coast Longshoremen's Unions are linked with each other and the Cosa Nostra.

Henry E. Petersen, chief of the Justice Department's organized crime section, which co-ordinates the government's interagency anticrime fight, made the statement during a discussion session at a national conference on crime control.

Petersen, who apparently did not know the informal seminar was open to reporters, refused later to elaborate on his statements. He has rarely spoken on the record to newsmen in the past.

His statement came as he delivered a casual, 10-minute explanation of the government's program against organized crime to a group of 80 panelists.

Petersen said that four or five years ago, Sen. John L. McClellan's (D-Ark.) Senate Rackets Committee was very concerned about reports of a possible merger between the Teamsters and the International Longshoremen's Association.

No formal merger took place, but Petersen said, "I know for a moral certainty that this amalgamation exists."

Furthermore, he said, "in the upper echelons they have more than an effective liaison between the ILA, the Cosa Nostra and the Teamsters."

He said the government had identified about 5,000 persons across the nation who were members of the Cosa Nostra, the nationwide crime syndicate also known as the Mafia.

Officials of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters had no immediate comment on the charges. ILA officers are attending a union convention in Buffalo, N.Y. yesterday and were not available for comment.

Milk Holding Action Seems Dead in State

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The milk market was reportedly returning to normal in Western Pennsylvania yesterday after members of the National Farmers Organization (NFO) abandoned their picketing of dairies.

The picketing began Sunday, but the Teamsters Union refused to honor the lines and the trucks rolled through.

"The boys were tired and discouraged," said the Erie County NFO president, Clair Flynn, of the pickets.

Flynn said there is also less dumping going on than when the campaign to force prices up began over two weeks ago.

"Our pocketbooks are hurting," he said.

Senate Ethics Committee Will Reprimand Sen. Dodd

By E. W. KENWORTHY
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — The Senate Ethics Committee has tentatively decided to recommend that Sen. Thomas J. Dodd be punished for misconduct, but that he not be expelled.

The committee made its decision last week, before recessing for the Easter holiday, when it instructed its staff to draft a report on Dodd's use of campaign contributions and receipts from testimonial dinners for his personal use.

Informed sources confirmed these instructions yesterday, but they would not say whether the committee had decided on the form of punishment of the Connecticut Democrat. If expulsion were avoided, the punishment could be censure, condemnation or a simple rebuke.

None of the three alternatives carries the loss of any senatorial privileges—voting, membership on committees, committee chairmanship or pay. All three are forms of moral chastisement. Censure and condemnation, which have been interpreted to be about the same, are the strongest.

The committee completed five days of public hearings on Dodd's financial affairs on March 17. Between then and March 23 the Ethics Committee met once to discuss the case.

Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., the committee chairman, said in a statement issued on behalf of the committee, that the meeting had been "for discussion only" and that "no official action had been taken."

In a stipulation of facts finally agreed to by Dodd and the committee two days before the hearings started, the senator acknowledged that he had used a major part of $173,000 netted from five testimonial affairs between 1961 and 1965 to pay personal bills and retire personal loans.

From one dinner alone, on March 6, 1965, the senator retired $82,000 in loans, of which $28,500 represented loans made to pay delinquent federal income taxes.

He also used the proceeds of the dinners to pay household expenses, liquor bills, club bills, personal air travel expenses and $9,479 in repairs to his home in North Stonington, Conn.

Dodd said that the purchasers of the tickets to these testimonial dinners intended to make him a personal gift to be used as he "saw fit," and that he was therefore free to use the proceeds either for political or personal expenses. On advice of counsel, he told the committee, he did not have to report these gifts as income, and therefore paid no taxes on them.

He vigorously denied that the dinners were held either to pay off past campaign deficits or to prepare for an upcoming campaign. Letters of solicitation mentioned both these purposes and made no mention of using the proceeds as a personal gift.

In his 1964 campaign for re-election, Dodd also received just over $200,000 in regular campaign contributions. In the stipulation he also acknowledged that he used many thousands of dollars of these contributions for personal expenses.

The Internal Revenue Service has ruled that any regular campaign contributions diverted to personal use must be treated as income and are taxable. The IRS is now looking into Dodd's use of both campaign funds and the proceeds of testimonial dinners.

In the stipulation Dodd acknowledged that on 13 occasions he had been paid twice for the same air fare—once by the Senate Disbursing Office and again by either a group that had asked him to speak or by his own campaign headquarters.

He stoutly insisted that he knew nothing of these double billings and that they were the fault of the "sloppy" bookkeeping of Michael V. O'Hare, his former office manager, although O'Hare did not submit the vouchers to the Senate Disbursing Office. O'Hare was one of four former employees who took documents from the senator's files, copied them, and turned them over to Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson, the Washington columnists.

If Dodd is punished he will be the second congressman disciplined this year. On March 1 the House barred Adam Clayton Powell Jr., D-N.Y., on the basis of unethical conduct.

FIRST OF A SERIES ON STATE REFORM

Justices Again Fight for Jobs

Editors Note: If the voters in May approve the constitutional convention proposal, convention delegates would be empowered to recommend wholesale changes in the minor judiciary. This powerful body of justices of the peace, aldermen and magistrates will be a big factor in the fate of the proposal. Here is the first of a three-part series exploring the minor judiciary.

"But give you the blank check of a Constitutional Convention? Never," the association said in the March issue of its publication, "The Pennsylvania Magistrates' Reporter."

Any recommendation by the convention would require voter approval in next year's primary election.

The minor judiciary has political influence, numbers—some 5,000—and tradition on its side. The minor judiciary consists of justices of the peace, aldermen in the bigger cities, and magistrates in Philadelphia. Constables also are part of the system.

As it now exists, the minor judiciary was established with the present 1873 constitution but its roots extend to medieval England.

The constitution authorizes two justices of the peace in each township and borough and one alderman in each city ward. Philadelphia has 28 magistrates.

Each municipality is entitled to one constable, as is each ward in the bigger cities.

JPs and constables are elected for six years.

All of the minor judiciary are paid under the fee system with the exception of the Philadelphia magistrates who receive $12,500 each annually. The chief magistrate gets $15,000.

Under the fee system, the JP is paid an amount varying with the type of case before him. For example, he gets $5 for a traffic case and $15 for a landlord and tenant proceeding.

Constables also are paid by fees but their schedule is considerably smaller than the JP's.

"Most are women, retired men, or 'moonlighters'," said one state senator. "Few are attorneys."

"A JP stands to do one of two things," he added. "Make a lot of money, or a lot of friends, or both. Most do both."

In Paris, It's Spring; The Rats Have Sprung

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
PARIS — It is springtime in Paris and while couples embrace at cafe tables, the Prefecture tries to direct popular thoughts to rats.

The annual anti-rat campaign opened yesterday morning, with policemen putting posters on walls and distributing leaflets to concierges urging them to keep garbage cans closed and drains sealed.

Dr. Lucienne Corre-Hurst, the city's chief epidemiologist, said the drive is launched in the spring because this is the prime mating season for rats.

Dr. Corre-Hurst scoffs at the popular saying that "every Parisian has his rat." In an interview, she conceded the city's sewer system and ancient cellars were admirable havens for them, but added she had walked kilometers through the sewers without seeing one.

STRIKE ALMOST CERTAIN

New York Faces News Blackout

NEW YORK (AP) — Contracts between five New York major daily newspapers and 10 unions expire at midnight tonight, and one union leader said a strike is "as likely as not."

If a strike comes it would be the fifth newspaper walkout in less than four years.

Since Nov. 1, 1962, some or all of the city's major dailies have been shut down by strikes for a total of 41 weeks, or an average of one out of every five weeks.

During that time the number of major dailies in New York shrank from nine to six. The Mirror ceased publication shortly after one long strike and the Herald Tribune, which was scheduled to continue morning publication under a merger with the World-Telegram & the Sun and Journal American died before the last strike was over.

That strike, resulting from the merger, was settled Sept. 12, 1966. Other newspapers in the city continued publication during the 140-day walkout.

Negotiations between the newspapers and the unions—in some cases joint meetings and in other cases individual sessions—continued Wednesday to avert another strike.

The unions seek new work agreements to replace expiring two-year contracts for 17,000 salaried and hourly rated employees of the Times, Daily News, World Journal Tribune, Long Island Press and Long Island Star-Journal, all members of the Publishers Association of New York City.

New York's sixth major daily, the Post, is not a member of the association and negotiates separately with the unions.

Four of the unions "are prepared to go on strike" after their contracts expire, said Thomas J. Murphy, chairman of the Newspaper Union Council and executive vice president of the New York Newspaper Guild. He said these are the printers, electricians, deliverers and machinists.

Two other unions, the photoengravers and the mailers, are due to meet before the contract deadline to vote on strike action, he said.

"It looks like they're all bogged down and a strike tomorrow night is as likely as not," Murphy said.

John J. Gaherin, president of the Publishers Association of New York City, said: "In fact the situation is nearing a crisis, it is not the fault of the publishers."

"We have made every possible effort to resolve the dispute," he said. "We practically pleaded with the unions to resolve their internal differences, and pious platitudes to the contrary, they still haven't done this."

The unions, with the exception of the Guild and the printers, are negotiating jointly with the association. The Guild always has negotiated separately with each newspaper. In the current negotiations, the printers are holding separate talks with the Times, too.

Bertram A. Powers, president of the printers union, said the union also may begin separate negotiations with the News.

Powers and Frederick C. Van Cott, president of the photoengravers, said after a morning session with the publishers that no wage offer had been made.

ANSTRUTHER, Scotland (AP) — "It is quite common to find two or three shrimps in the bath," said Dr. Ian MacKintosh, 39, general manager of an electronic firm, in refusing to pay his town water bill because, he contended, the water is polluted.

The town council voted he would have to pay for the water but the shrimp is free.

WOULDN'T ALLOW RABIES SHOTS

Father's Gamble Has Paid Off

By JEAN HELLER
SPEONK, N.Y. (AP) — It has been four weeks since Charles LeBrun decided to gamble with his son's life knowing that if the boy died, "I will be the one who killed him."

The gamble apparently has succeeded.

On March 2, Michael LeBrun, 8, was attacked and bitten by a pack of dogs as he rode his bicycle near his Long Island home.

Michael's parents said doctors told them it had been 20 years since a rabid dog was found in Suffolk County, that a series of rabies shots was a painful affair and that people had been known to die from them.

Based on those facts, LeBrun decided against having the boy undergo the injections.

U.S. Public Health Service and World Health Organization officials say the incubation period for rabies is usually four to six weeks after exposure. The more serious the wounds, they say, the shorter the period.

Michael was bitten severely on the arms and legs, so the incubation period would be closer to four weeks, possibly even less, they said, Thursday the four weeks are over.

Since the attack, LeBrun has hovered around Michael, watching for fever, undue restlessness and hypersalivation, symptoms that might signal the beginning of a painful slide toward death.

"We've been taking his temperature and feeling his forehead 30 times a day," LeBrun said. "Ten days ago we were in the city — New York — and Michael said he didn't feel well. We brought him right home and found he had a fever."

"We went into a panic. But it was only a cold. The next day he was fine."

LeBrun's decision not to have his son inoculated touched off a controversy over his actions, and over just how painful and dangerous rabies inoculations are.

There are two types of rabies vaccine. Both contain dead rabies virus. The older of the two is produced by raising the virus in rabbit vaccine and is a bit more potent. But it can cause more frequent and more severe reactions, according to the World Health Organization's expert committee on rabies.

One person in 2,500 to 8,000 who takes the rabbit vaccine may encounter a severe reaction. Death has occurred from these reactions in one out of 35,000 persons given the vaccine.

With the somewhat less potent duck embryo vaccine, only six individuals have suffered severe reactions in 172,000 who have received the vaccine, says the U.S. Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Ga.

But both vaccines result in some pain to the person taking them. Daily doses are injected beneath the skin in the abdominal area for 14 to 21 days.

A New York City health official said: "The man — LeBrun — appears to have made the right decision for the wrong reasons. The chances were slim enough that the dogs were infected that treatment didn't seem to be indicated. But the father's fear of the inoculations was vastly overblown."

Despite this reassurance, LeBrun is still worried.

"We probably won't stop watching Michael for a year," he said.

Newlywed Priest Didn't 'Run Away'

PEWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Kurth begin married life with problems common to newlyweds, and with a special conflict: he is a Roman Catholic priest who violated church doctrine to marry a former nun.

Kurth, 35, said he still considers himself to be a priest, that he and his 34-year-old wife have no intention of not being devout Catholics, but that he acknowledges the assumption that a priest's violation of celibacy means excommunication.

"But I have not asked for a release from my vows," he said last night, "I could not freely give up my priesthood."

He and his bride, having avoided newsmen with a secret wedding ceremony at 1 a.m. Saturday, met with a newsmen in their rented lakeside cottage in this resort community west of Milwaukee to offset what Kurth called an impression that they were "running away" from reality.

Aware of the shadow of excommunication, they were married by a Protestant pastor to avoid further violation of church rules, Kurth said.

As newlyweds, their initial concern is making a living. Neither has a full-time job although both are certified teachers.

They acknowledged that as Catholics, excommunication represents an emotional concern. But Father Kurth's superior, The Very Rev. Harold Liebl, provincial of the Pallotine order in this area, repeated yesterday that he has no comment on the situation at this time.

Kurth and his wife, the former Shirley Weis, who was a nun until last year, said each had doubts about some church rules — including celibacy for priests — before they decided to marry.

"I did not leave the Franciscans to be married," she said. "I had many other questions about community living. We did not try to influence each other."

"We do not feel that we have left the religious life," Kurth said. "We have not left the Catholic church."

"Our love developed from mutual respect and affection," he said.

Kurth, and the former Sister Fredalene both taught at Pius XI high school in Milwaukee.

He was ordained in 1958, said he found he had doubts about celibacy, and asked for a leave of absence "to think it over, to try to make an objective decision."

Kurth was attending Catholic University in Washington, D.C., when his future bride left the order.

"I took that leave in order to study, read, meditate, consult with others," Mrs. Kurth said.

Railroaders' Union Striking 60 Lines

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — The Order of Railroad Conductors and Brakemen — ORCB — said yesterday it will strike at 12:01 a.m. Saturday against most of the nation's railroads unless the carriers continue a disputed health and welfare agreement.

The announced walkout of some 18,500 members would hit between 60 and 70 railroads — excepting about 35 per cent of the carriers which have their own health and hospital plans with the union.

It would be separate from a strike of some 135,000 railroad shop craft union members set for April 12.

Clyde F. Lane, ORCB president, said at the union's headquarters here that the railroads through the National Railroad Labor Conference, have threatened to cancel hospital, medical and insurance benefits for employees and their families unless the union accepts railroad terms for a new wage-employment contract now being negotiated.

He asserted the railroads plan to cancel the health and welfare coverage Saturday in violation of the Railroad Labor Act.

"This is the first time within our knowledge that an employer has used the withdrawal of hospital, medical and insurance benefits for employees and their dependents as a club to force them to accept an inferior con-

Briefly Speaking

Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department was alerted by Warren Fire Department of a car fire in the first parking lot of Kinzua Dam yesterday afternoon. The fire crew found nothing at the scene and the call was eventually dismissed as a prank.

"Hap" Albaugh, chairman of Clarendon Hotstove League, last night announced a lower than anticipated number of boys signing up for summer baseball. The last chance to sign up is April 5, at the fire hall.

The next meeting of the proposed Clarendon sewer project is scheduled for Thursday, April 6.

Members of Russell Volunteer Fire Department will continue Sunday to search the area around Akeley bridge in an effort to find clues to the disappearance of Leo Laughlin of Lakewood, N.Y., who was believed to have drowned in Conewango Creek several weeks ago.

Two persons were injured in a head-on collision on Route 36, three and one-half miles south of Tionesta yesterday afternoon and were taken to Titusville Hospital. Injured were Donald Wagner, 27, of Tionesta and Thomas Guiler of RD 1, Mercer. State police said the men had facial lacerations and possible internal injuries.

A motorcycle rider, Sandra J. Farrell, 17, of 43 Musante st., received a lacerated left knee and was treated and released from Warren General Hospital last night after an accident at Mill street and Route 337 in Pleasant township.

State trooper Gary Rain of Warren subpoena said this girl attempted to make a left turn with her cycle when a car being driven by Mabel M. Foltz, 63, of 106 Willow Lane tried to pass her and struck the rear wheel. It upset.

Borough police have confiscated three B-B air rifles during the past week from youths caught firing them. A state law requires persons shooting such rifles to be 18 years of age.

A two car accident on Route 6 early this morning at the F and M railroad crossing near Warren Concrete Products Inc. caused a large traffic snarl. At press time the accident was still being investigated by state police. No injuries were sustained in the wreck.

Damage Minor In Russell Garage Fire

Minor damage was reported to a garage adjacent to the home of Harold Wilkins on Priest Hollow rd., two miles east of Russell as flames flared up in the back of the garage about 7 p.m. yesterday.

No one was in the house at the time of the blaze but a neighbor, Mrs. Ruth Blomquist spotted smoke and phoned Russell firemen while her husband attempted to confine the fire.

Two fire trucks and 17 firemen appeared at the scene and in minutes quelled the fire before major damage resulted. The cause of the blaze is still undetermined and the loss was estimated at around $200, part of which was covered by insurance.

NFO Faces Charge Of Using Coercion

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The federal government charged the National Farmers Organization yesterday with using coercion in an attempt to monopolize interstate sale of milk in 19 states.

Officials of the NFO promptly asserted filing of the civil anti-trust suit in U.S. District Court here was part of a campaign by the Johnson administration to deny farmers the right to bargain for fair prices.

Judge Roy L. Stephenson set a hearing for 1 p.m. Thursday for arguments on whether to issue a restraining order against the farm group.

The Justice Department charged the NFL had forced nonmember farmers, truckers and processors to join in a milk-withholding campaign which started March 15. It did not challenge the holdback by NFO members themselves.

The suit asked the NFO and its members be ordered not to threaten nonmember farmers and others in the trade and not to try to monopolize sale of milk by illegal means.

Oren Lee Staley, NFO president, lashed out from his headquarters at Corning, Iowa, at what he called "the Johnson administration's policy to keep farm prices low."

It was the first time since the milk holdout began that Staley has openly brought politics into his group's attempt to gain a milk price increase of two cents a quart.

"The NFO has never condoned or advocated any illegal acts, and it never will," he said. "The real heart of the federal action is to stop farmers from bargaining and thereby gaining fair prices for their products."

Staley contended the federal suit was filed "at a time when we were winning" and said all farmers "will be shocked by this type of action."

He added the NFO will obey any court order but pledged his organization has "no intention of quitting" the milk holdout.

The key issue in the dispute affects 100 newsmen at the network-owned stations in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. The reporters are seeking a $300 base salary and a 50 per cent return of all commercial fees on sponsored programs on which they appear.

The union proposes that the stations receive 50 per cent of all commercial fees on news programs until the amount of all fees equals the worker's basic salary. The newsmen would retain the rest.

Until now newsmen on network-owned stations have negotiated contracts on an individual basis. Salaries range from $225 to $350 a week, but some reporters have earned as much as $800 a week.

There is little likelihood of a settlement before Saturday, when union officials and network executives meet in Washington at the offices of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Women Enlisted By London Royal Philharmonics

LONDON (AP) — It's taken a long time but women at last have joined London's Royal Philharmonic Orchestra.

For the first time since the late Sir Thomas Beecham founded the orchestra 21 years ago, women musicians will be in the Philharmonic's ranks at the Royal Festival Hall today.

Elgar Howarth, 31, Philharmonic chairman, said Sir Thomas had two firm objections to orchestra women: "If they are exceptionally pretty they would distract the orchestra. If they were ugly they would distract him." Howarth called the five new members "very attractive women who are also first-class players."

Reforms

The turnover is big. Vacancies are filled by the governor with the consent of the Senate. Each week it is in session, the Senate gets a long list of JP appointments.

As a result, statistics concerning the minor judiciary are hard to obtain and keep up to date.

One such survey was made in 1962 by the Pennsylvania Bar Association in cooperation with Pennsylvania State University. Findings were reported in a publication entitled "Minor Courts in Pennsylvania."

According to this publication, most of the JPs holding other jobs are skilled laborers, followed by real estate or insurance agents, and then housewives. Only seven are attorneys.

After his election, the JP must post a bond. It ranges from $500 to $3,000, depending on the locality. The same applies to a constable.

The most familiar is his jurisdiction in traffic cases.

State records show that JPs turned over to the state $2.5 million last year in fines collected from traffic convictions. This figure is slightly higher than the year previous.

The JP also has jurisdiction over both civil and criminal cases and in this regard is the first judicial stop for a defendant if his case goes to a higher court.

In the non-judicial realm he may notarize documents and perform miscellaneous assignments. He also may perform marriages although, according to the bar association, this practice is declining. In 1961, for example, nearly half of the minor judiciary reported they did not perform any marriages.

Often the JPs prepare income tax returns as a sideline.

In civil actions, the JP has jurisdiction in contracts up to $500. In criminal proceedings, the JP is the committing magistrate in most misdemeanors and felonies; i.e., he binds over the defendant to the grand jury.

One little known fact is that the JP may deal in real estate without a license. Although he may not hire salesmen.

However, the State Real Estate Board and the Pennsylvania Realtors Association indicated that this represents a minor portion of real estate sales. TOMORROW: Controversies and the JP.

VISIT BLUE JAY CAMP

Murray Hartshorn, director of the Blue Jay Job Corps Camp, points to the chart which marks the progress of each Job Corpsman aboard. Viewing the chart are Thailand provincial governors.

PART OF THEIR STUDIES

Blue Jay Corps Camp Visited by Thai Officials

By FRANKLIN HOFF

Blue Jay Job Corps Conservation Center staff and corpsmen were hosts yesterday to two distinguished government officials from Thailand.

Utai Nakapreesha and Chamnan Javanapogse toured the expanding Job Corps facility on Marienville Ranger District of Allegheny National Forest. They observed its multiple educational and work programs in action, and were briefed on the entire Job Corps program by staff officials and corpsmen.

The visiting party and a group of newspaper correspondents had lunch at the Blue Jay mess hall cafeteria.

The Thai officials were guests of the Community Action Agency of Jefferson and Clarion Counties, accompanied by that agency's executive administrative assistant, Rocky Catanzaro of Punxsutawney.

Both officials have finished a trimester at University of Pittsburgh's graduate school of International Affairs, Institute of Local Government. They pursue their university studies at night, after spending a full day studying poverty areas in the region.

Chamnan explains it is their hope to apply much of what they learn in the United States to their problems in Thailand.

Donald Girton, deputy supervisor of the Allegheny National Forest, welcomed the visitors, and outlined the overall Job Corps program. He then introduced staff members and Job Corpsmen, who in turn described various aspects of the program, and its solid accomplishments. These included Murray Hartshorn, director of the center; John Burkett, director of education; Charles Toms, administrative officer; Dean Flanders, teacher; foreman John Condra, Webster Jordan and Ben West; William Duemling, forester; Henry Young, Corpsmen supervisor and others.

Utai is governor of Sakonkorn district of Saraburi Province in Thailand. Chamnan is governor of Wanonnai district, Skol Nakhon Province.

Utai is responsible for 70,000 people. Chamnan governs about 60,000.

Utai said 95 per cent of the people are rural, and very poor. "This is the most important part of my job," he observes. He oversees building roads, public health, public safety, public works, tax collections, and other phases of administering an area of about 20,000 square miles, in central Thailand. He also has an administrator under him in charge of forestry.

Chamnan domain is in the northeastern region. His administration covers the same areas of government.

Utai, described Thailand as about the size of Texas, with a population of 30 million, but needing 50 million. It is over 70 per cent literate, though predominantly rural. The capital, Bangkok, has a population of three million.

Thais are extremely proud of the fact that for the entire 800 years of their modern history as a nation they have been totally independent, and have defended themselves against encroachment by neighboring nations and colonial powers. They call their land Muang Thai, which means "Land of the Free." It is the only country of southeast Asia which has never at any time been ruled by a European power.

Chamnan mentioned that their chief agricultural crop is rice, and rice exports provide a large portion of the national income. They also export sugar, much of it to the United States. Thailand is one of the world's leading producers of tin, some of which is mined under the ocean.

Within the past 35 years has come the establishment of five universities in Bangkok, and three others in the upper part of the land. These are first rate higher education institutions. Today many scholars come to the United States for advanced degrees.

Before returning to their native Thailand, Utai and Chamnan will have a visit with President Johnson.

TRIAL BY BLACKOUT

Jury in the Dark? Prisoner Thinks So

By BARRY SCHWEID
WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice is often blindfolded, but can a man get a fair trial when the jury is in the dark?

Michael Myerson, a 70-year-old business broker, says he can't. And in Myerson's case the question is hardly academic. He's serving a three-year sentence in the federal prison in Atlanta.

Myerson, who is from Coral Gables, Fla., was convicted in federal court in New York city of understating his taxable income for '56 by more than $209,000.

What makes his conviction unusual is that the case went to the jury two minutes before a massive power failure darkened the court house, most of the city and a large part of the northeastern United States.

Increase Reward For Capture Of Young Vandals

JAMESTOWN — The reward to apprehend the vandals who did thousands of dollars worth of damage to Jefferson Junior High School here last Friday, was doubled yesterday when $50 was contributed by an anonymous donor.

The Jamestown police department donated the first $50 Tuesday.

Police Chief John Paladino indicated that his detectives are working full-time on the case and are following every lead in an effort to apprehend the vandals.

Thus far, according to police authorities, more than 100 persons have been questioned. No one is being held and no one has been charged.

For some 3½ hours, his attorney, Philip J. Ryan of New York city says in an appeal to the Supreme Court, the jury pondered the case and events of the 4-day trial "in darkness" before finding Myerson guilty of tax evasion.

The Justice Department isn't taking the attack on Myerson's conviction sitting down.

This week Solicitor General Thurgood Marshall told the court in a brief that Myerson's trial lawyer had a chance to object after the lights went out and didn't.

Jamestown Food Stamp Postponed

JAMESTOWN — Welfare Commissioner Leonard B. Crissey told members of Jamestown Welfare Board at their monthly meeting yesterday that the food stamp plan scheduled to begin in May has been delayed one month. Final plans cannot be completed until June 1.

Crissey called for and received an extension of one month of the present plan under which the Welfare Department distributes surplus food. During the past month more than 18,000 pounds of federal surplus food was distributed to 561 families in the city of Jamestown, representing a total 2,040 individuals.

Commissioner Crissey also informed the welfare board that the Visiting Nurses Association has increased its rates from 4 dollars to $4.40 for each house call.

April Is Cancer Month

April is Cancer Control Month by Presidential proclamation. During the month the American Cancer Society is asking the public to take three important actions.

If you do not know cancer's warning signals, learn them.

If you have not already had an annual health checkup, have one.

Support the Society's programs of research, education and service. The first two are for your protection now; the third for possible protection in the future.

Only 69 per cent of the public can name one of cancer's several warning signals. A better record is urgent. Going to a doctor at a first warning signal usually can lead to early diagnosis if cancer is present, and early diagnosis followed by proper treatment greatly enhances the chance of cure.

An annual health checkup, coupled with response to any of cancer's warning signs, is the best possible protection against death from cancer. A doctor can often detect cancer before a person is aware something is wrong. And the doctor can sometimes find conditions that might lead to cancer if uncorrected.

Funds for the Society's program of research, education and service are essentials in the fight against cancer. Voluntary health organizations such as the American Cancer Society have a vital function in financing research, stimulating support by the government and other fund-granting groups and pioneering in what is called "risk investment" in the hope of developing new and solid ideas. Education about cancer prevention, detection and treatment must be broadened and intensified. Much can and should be done, too, to aid the cancer patient needing help.

Remember that only ten years ago one-fourth of those who developed cancer were saved; now it is one-third; it could be one-half, without adding an iota to our present knowledge and skills. Much of what happens depends on your personal responsibility and your financial investment in programs of research, education and service through the American Cancer Society.

Free Speech For Everyone?

WASHINGTON — The free speech movements on various campuses have become more militant in recent months and I naturally was interested to know what they were up to. So I went over to the Sitdown Institute of Technology to confer with an organization called the Students for a Utterly Free Speech and the Preservation of Democratic Institutions Through the Exchange of Ideas Movement.

The young man in charge of the organization was very happy to speak to me.

"Sir," I said, "what is the purpose of the Students for a Utterly Free Speech?"

"Our main purpose is to keep speakers who come to college campuses from speaking."

"That's a very idealistic goal," I said, "how do you do this?"

"It's quite simple. When the speaker starts talking we begin to heckle and shout at him so he can't be heard. The more he persists, the noisier we get and pretty soon everyone is shouting and if we're lucky it turns into a brawl."

"This probably sounds like a stupid question but if your organization is presumably for free speech, why don't you let the speaker say what he has on his mind?"

"But we're not for free speech for the SPEAKER. We're for free speech for ourselves. We demand the right to interrupt anybody any time he opens his mouth. This is still a democratic country and we have a right to prevent anyone we want from speaking."

"But if you don't hear what the speaker has to say, how do you know you disagree with him?"

"We know we disagree with him before he comes. Anything he says might just confuse us, we're not fools, you know."

"I didn't say, for argument's sake, that a speaker may have something new to add to the debate. Don't you think he should be able to put forth his position at the university?"

"None of the speakers has anything new to say. Besides, if we let one speaker put forth his arguments, then we'd have to let other speakers put forth their arguments, and pretty soon you'd have all sorts of ideas floating around and it would hurt the free speech movement."

"How could it hurt the free speech movement?"

"Well, our members don't want to sit around listening to people making a lot of speeches all day. They like action. That's why they joined the free speech movement. We prefer to boo and shout a lot. It gets rid of our hostilities."

"I can see that. But on the other hand, look at it from the speaker's point of view. He's probably worked on his speech for several days; taken time off to come to the university. Shouldn't he be allowed to talk?"

"It's not our fault he went to all that trouble. If he were smart he would have just written the opening lines of his speech, and we would have seen to it that no one knew that was all he had to say. We'll cooperate with a speaker if he cooperates with us."

"Is there any situation where you would allow a speaker to finish his speech?"

"We don't like to make exceptions but I guess if he used four-letter words we might let him finish. You see, our free speech movement believes we should be allowed to use four-letter words."

"How do four-letter words contribute to the cause of free speech?"

"It helps us understand the exchange of ideas."

The Credibility Gap-I

In order to avoid the embarrassment of calling a spade a spade, newspapermen have tacitly agreed to talk about the credibility gap. This is a polite euphemism for deception, rather like the habit of our Victorian grandpapa who spoke of limbs when they were too shy to speak of legs.

The phrase has been invented during the Johnson administration and it is quite significant that nothing like it seems to have been needed before. In its exact meaning the gap is, as Henry L. Trewhitt of the Baltimore Sun has put it, "the degree of refusal by the public to accept at face value what the government says and does."

It goes without saying that if this gap is wide, the country is in the perilous position of not believing that it can trust its government.

Every experienced newspaperman knows quite well—as James Reston points out in his penetrating new book, "The Artillery of Peace"—that there is an inherent conflict between public officials and reporters. But so far as I know there has never been a time when the President and the working press distrusted each other so much as they do today.

The current conflict has become abnormally acute, and the relations between the Johnson administration and the press are unique, differing not only in degree, but in kind from the normal tensions between responsible officials and free journalists. The conflict today has degenerated to the point where there is no longer much pretense that the news is not being manipulated in order to make the Congress, the newspapers, the networks and the public at large support the President.

The only question is supposed to be whether the manipulation works, how successfully the President and his officials and his press officers can operate. The credibility gap today is not the result of honest misunderstanding between the President and the press in this complicated world. It is the result of a deliberate policy of artificial manipulation of official news.

The purpose of this manipulation is to create a consensus for the President, to stifle debate about his aims and his policies, to thwart deep probing into what has already happened, what is actually happening, what is going to happen. In its press relations the administration does not hold with the fundamental American principle that true opinion arises from honest inquiry and open debate and that true opinion is necessary to free government. For this administration, the right opinions are those which lead to consensus with the leader, and to create such true opinion it is legitimate to wipe out the distinction between patriotism and patrioterism and to act on the assumption that the end justifies the means.

The credibility gap opened in the first weeks of President Johnson's tenure. It was early December, 1963, and the first big official business before him was the completion of next year's budget, which had begun by President Kennedy. At his first press conference on Dec. 7, 1963, "reporters came away with the impression," says James Deakin of the St. Louis Post Dispatch, that "the new budget would be between $102 and $113 billion."

But at Mr. Johnson's second press conference, 11 days later, the President said that the expenditures would be "substantially $89 billion," which was the amount of the Kennedy budget.

A few days later, says Deakin, "the news spread that the new budget would be $100 billion, give or take 2 per cent either way." But when the 1965 budget was actually submitted to Congress it was down to $97.7 billion—which was under the Kennedy budget.

Being unwilling to admit that he has changed his policy, Mr. Johnson has persistently manipulated the official news of war and peace. When he was escalating the war he has covered it with gestures about peace. In the process there has been damaged deeply the credibility of the Pentagon about the size of the American commitment, the size of the military and civilian casualties and about the costs of the war.

There has been damaged, also, the credibility of the State Department on the conduct of the war. Thus, in August, 1964, Hanoi sent word to the United Nations that their representatives would meet with ours in Ramon.

In September, Secretary of State Dean Rusk replied to a question about whether it was possible to have a negotiated settlement of the war. He said, "Let me first say that I don't know of any negotiations now going on anywhere, overt or covert, about a settlement in South Vietnam."

He made no reference to the North Vietnamese. Until U Thant, the U.N. Secretary, revealed what happened, the State Department kept up the fiction that offer to talk had been made by Hanoi. (To be continued)

JOSEPH ALSOP

Battle For Binh Dinh

WITH 'SHINY BOOT,' BINH DINH PROVINCE, VIETNAM — "Shiny Boot Six, Shiny Boot Six, Propwash. Six is heading your way. Over." By this odd formula, the arrival of Maj. Gen. John Norton, commander of the famous First Air Cavalry Division (Propwash), is announced to Lt. Col. Ardrie McClure, commander of one of the division's forward battalions (Shiny Boot).

The tiny helipad on a rocky mountain spur would hardly accommodate two good suburban carports. The spur ends in a high knoll, and here is the Shiny Boot command post. On the knoll's highest point are artillery pieces, roaring angrily, continuously served by sweating men naked to the waist who seem like animated bronzes until you see how vulnerably young their faces are. Behind the guns are the deep foxholes and fortified redoubts of the CP.

Spread out below the knoll lies the whole lovely Bong Son plain with the sea to the east and the mountains to the west. At the plain's extremity, vast, dark plumes of smoke tell of bombs dropping. And in the middle distance, where Col. McClure's companies are heavily engaged, the trees of a palm grove crazily tilt or even leap from the ground amid bright spurts of flame as the artillery pounds the enemy positions.

The present phase of the battle for Binh Dinh Province began some days ago when two battalions of the 22nd Regiment of the Third North Vietnamese Division returned to the Bong Son plain from Quang Ngai Province to the north, where the regiment had fled some weeks ago to lick its wounds and get replacements. Day and night since then the men of the air cavalry have been harrying those two battalions.

It is strange fighting, something like a half-blindfold English fox hunt in which the hounds are grimly skillful and wonderfully swift, while the fox, besides his craft, has the advantage of countless open earths to go to ground in. The whole plain, in truth, is riddled with hiding holes and tunnels; even the embankments of the rice paddies are hollow. And "you could walk for miles without putting your head above ground," as Col. McClure puts it.

The fox's gait gives the fighting a pattern, however. He can never be truly encircled, though he can be sore beset, for he can always sneak away in the night. But he cannot sneak very far, for he must carry with him all his wounded, who are many. Thus, a night movement of more than 1,500 to 2,000 yards is most uncommon, and when dawn breaks, the hounds cast forward to pick up the scent again.

Eventually, when he has had enough, or when good luck gives him a good opening, the enemy will melt away once more to seek heavier replacements for the heavy losses of this short phase in the battle of Binh Dinh. This battle, it must be understood, has been going on for a long time, and this is natural, for the prize is the richest province of the central Vietnamese coast.

Two years ago the VC main forces hereabout were strong enough to come within a hairsbreadth of occupying the province capital, Qui Nhon. A bit more than a year ago, the battle then began in deadly earnest, when the brilliant American commander in the Second Corps area, Lt. Gen. S. R. Larsen, decided that Binh Dinh was the key to the whole corps-area position.

Long since, the heartland of the province, the big rice plain around Qui Nhon, ceased to be within the striking range of the Third North Vietnamese Division. Now the battle centers in the province's northern tip, this Bong Son plain that Shiny Boot's CP so wonderfully overlooks.

This has been, essentially, a battle of attrition, and the North Vietnamese and VC main force losses have been fearful to contemplate. In the present round, which is called "Pershing," for example, the enemy has had just under 800 killed in action and has lost an almost equal number of men taken prisoner on the battlefield between Feb. 12, when this round began, and the end of last week.

To put their Third Division back in the ring, the Hanoi warplanners have lately been forced to provide more than 2,000 replacements—close to half the monthly total of North Vietnamese infiltrators into South Vietnam. And in this round or the next or the next after that one can now be pretty sure that all of Binh Dinh will be freed from pressure from the enemy's big units—which also means that the VC infrastructure in Binh Dinh will be deprived of the big units.

DREW PEARSON

Interview With President Frei

(Editor's Note: Drew Pearson, who earlier this month traveled through Latin America reporting on problems to be discussed at the Summit Conference, today continues his interview with President Frei of Chile.)

SANTIAGO—"The Latin American people are developing a critical viewpoint," said President Eduardo Frei Montalva of Chile. "They are not interested in dinners and speeches. They want results. They consider President Johnson a doer, a pusher, and with his push, if nothing is accomplished at the Summit Conference they will be disappointed."

President Frei was of the opinion that the most important accomplishment at the Summit Conference probably would be through regional agreements.

He did not elaborate, but already Central America is working on its own joint economic problems through a common market; Bolivia is talking about piping gas to the industrial city of Sao Paulo in Brazil; Venezuela and Colombia are working on their mutual problems; and the only way to solve the joint problems of Peru, Bolivia, and Chile is through treaties of irrigation and access to the sea agreements.

Some of these Latin American problems can no more be settled without cooperation by neighbors than the state of New York can prevent air pollution over Manhattan without getting agreements from the state of New Jersey.

And for centuries in Latin America this cooperation has been absent. Instead there have been the same national rivalries which churned up Western Europe until it combined to form the now prosperous Common Market.

President Frei had told me in some detail about the importance of education in Chile and the advances his administration had made in building schools and training teachers. I asked him why, if education was so important, Chile was spending money on new British Hawker Hunter fighter planes which Chile did not need unless for use against her neighbors.

"There are only 21 planes, and they cost only $20 million," President Frei shot back. "All of our present planes are out of date, and the Air Force has needed new planes to train young pilots. These new British Hunters are not even supersonic. We develop our pilots from the Air Force for commercial aviation."

"The Chilean navy wanted a carrier," said President Frei, "but I said no, we couldn't afford it. However, we could afford these new British Hunters."

"Why don't you eliminate rivalry between the military of Latin American countries by training your troops jointly, just as the NATO armies are trained jointly between West Germany, Belgium, and The Netherlands?" I asked.

President Frei said he never thought of this but said he would keep an open mind.

SYLVIA PORTER

War Against Pollution

Corporations, cities, towns and taxpayers the nation over are now beginning to recognize that astronomical sums will be spent in coming years to control air and water pollution.

The estimated $5 billion a year U. S. industry and government already are spending to combat pollution by factories, garbage incinerators, cars, fumes, sewage, etc., could be at least doubled by 1970, less than three years away, according to New York's Chase Manhattan Bank. Estimates of pollution control costs over the next generation range up to $300 billion for sewage and industrial waste treatment, auto exhaust control, incinerator improvement, etc.

As just one hard illustration of the anti-pollution spending trend, federal outlays for the construction of waste treatment facilities in U. S. communities are due to rise from $150 million in fiscal 1967 to $450 million in fiscal 1968 to $1.25 billion in fiscal 1971. Half of our state legislatures are considering tough new anti-pollution laws and regulations, aimed primarily at industrial polluters.

In view of this, what is private industry doing — and not doing — to clean up the nation's air and water?

You are in the majority today if you believe that industry is shirking its responsibility to combat the pollution problem, according to one recent poll. Yet here are little recognized facts about the extent of industry's effort:

A survey of 3,000 American corporations by the National Industrial Conference Board revealed that these corporations now have a capital investment of $1 billion in facilities to reduce or control water pollution, with yearly operating expenses of $100 million. Total industry spending to combat water pollution today is estimated at $400 million a year.

Just in the past decade, the electric power industry estimates it has spent $750 million

Frei was elected president in a bitter battle with Dr. Salvador Allende, who had the all-out support of the Communist and Socialist parties and who campaigned on a promise to expropriate all foreign property in Chile. Frei and the Christian Democratic party also made promises about curtailing American copper influence. Which ever side won, it looked bad for the huge Anaconda and Kennecott copper interests which have long dominated the economy of Chile.

In Chile, with the price of copper zooming as a result of the war in Vietnam and with the United States buying every pound it can get, copper is more than ever the backbone of the Chilean economy.

I asked President Frei, therefore, how he had solved the problem of regulating American copper companies in conformity with his campaign statements, yet at the same time continuing top production.

"We do not seek to take over the copper companies but rather to have some voice in their direction," President Frei explained. "We want a partnership which will profit both of us. Yesterday I signed the last contract with a copper company—Kennecott. It provides for partnership."

"Some Chileans complain that the copper companies seem pleased with the new contracts," Frei continued. "And since they are pleased, some Chileans suspect that there is something wrong. But there is nothing wrong when both sides are happy with a contract."

"When one side is sad, then a contract is not good. But when two intelligent parties are convinced that the other will not cheat the other, then you have a good contract. I believe that this is what we have worked out in our partnership arrangements with the American copper companies."

"Under the new arrangement, the American companies will invest $540 million in Chile in four years. And Anaconda has begun its investment even before the new contract was signed."

"As a result of these investments we will have, by 1970, a production of 1,200,000 tons of copper, doubling annual output. And our production of refined copper will increase from 200,000 tons, as it is now, to 750,000 tons."

President Frei went on to explain how he was applying this same rule regarding partnership between Chile and foreign capital to steel and other industries. He said that the American Export-Import Bank in Washington had okay'd a loan for Chile's steel company which would double the production of steel, and that two months ago he had opened two big cellulose plants in cooperation with American capital.

"On Sunday I go to Concepcion to open our first ethylene plant. We are also starting automobile assembly plants in cooperation with Fiat, Ford and Chrysler."

"These are some of the ways you can bring about revolution without a firing squad," concluded the president of Chile.

Clamor Over Insurance

HARRISBURG — One of the more interesting by-plays of the current 1967 legislative session is the fiftid determination of legislative Democrats to keep alive a clamor over Pennsylvania's Insurance Department they honed to a jangle point two years ago.

In one basic — and prime — respect the circumstances are different this year, which reduces almost to the perfunctory the issue of questionably high insurance rates and fading-out-of-business insurance companies of marginal repute.

This simple difference revolves around the fact that anti-administration Democrats this year are not in control of either the Senate or House of Representatives — a far cry from 1965 when they held the upper hand in the House during the then in office Republican Scranton Administration.

It was during that session that Democrats hammered through a full-blooded House committee probe of Pennsylvania's Insurance Department and the Keystone State's insurance laws — with much of the chaff they husked of a marginal or questionable nature (except of course for political purposes), producing little that hadn't already been known.

It served its purpose of proving embarrassing for the then in office Scranton Administration — but in the end legislative Democrats were able only to produce any great clamor and commotion in the sole chamber they controlled, the House of Representatives.

This is what can be done when political control of a legislative house is in the hands of the so-called opposition — opposition that is, to the administration in power at the time.

This year however Democrats control neither the House nor Senate. Their voice when they speak, complain or chastise, becomes purely a secondary voice. By virtue of circumstance it can be little more than the "voice of complaint."

Thus legislative Democrats this session are finding it difficult to make the insurance issue, as such, stick or even come to public notice, except through allied ghost voices.

Even then it isn't a question of what legislative Democrats "will do" — for the simple reason they do not have it within their power to "do" anything this session.

In other words, the big stick they had within their grasp in 1965 does not exist this year inasmuch as both the Senate and House sticks are held by pro-administration blocs.

This then reduces the insurance issue almost to the routine, and not in effect an "issue" at all.

Governor Shafer long ago made clear his administration planned certain insurance reforms — ironically perhaps reforms that actually were needed during preceding Democratic administrations, long before Mr. Scranton assumed his gubernatorial robes in 1963 (a point however not brought out by Democratic partisans).

In the final analysis, whatever is done this session on the insurance revamping front will not be accomplished by legislative Democrats (inasmuch as they alone do not have the votes to accomplish anything) but by pro-administration Republicans running both the House and Senate this year.

It is interesting to note that a whole swath of so-called "insurance reform" bills have been introduced so far in both House and Senate — but by and large by minority Democratic lawmakers.

Democrats well know that because they do not control House or Senate committees this year their legislative efforts do not enjoy even a snowball's chance — but "for the record" it looks good.

The key to any insurance reform program this year lies almost exclusively in what the Shafer Administration ultimately proposes — not what anti-administration Democrats in control of the House of Representatives came up with two years ago!

The Man Not In The News

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON—The answer to the question "Why is the world such a mess?" lies right before our eyes in the personal sketches of the world's shakers and movers which the newspapers and magazines are so fond of drawing.

If the sketches can be believed, all these men are unpleasantly alike. They are invariably "brilliant." They all work 16 hours a day and have magnificent senses of humor (according to their secretaries). Though they drive their staffs mercilessly, they demand twice as much of themselves. They throw off ideas with an ease that astounds their colleagues. Though they rarely go out socially, and on those rare occasions never take more than one drink—their backbreaking work schedules do not prevent them from helping their children with their algebra, reading Immanuel Kant and keeping in trim with regular bouts of squash or golf.

It is clear that the world will stay in a mess until we learn to discover in print more men in the news sketches like the following:

Got Your Sticker?

HARRISBURG (AP) — A 10-day extension for displaying 1967 stickers on automobile registration tags was announced yesterday by the Department of Revenue.

The department said the deadline was postponed from midnight March 31 to midnight April 10 because of an estimated 300,000 applications still outstanding.

Warner M. Depuy, secretary of revenue, said that the Bureau of Motor Vehicles had issued 3.9 million of an estimated 4.2 million license renewals.

The remainder could not possibly be issued in the next two days, Depuy said. Many motorists came personally to the bureau's offices here to speed the process, resulting in traffic tie-ups around the Capitol.

Veteran bureau employees termed the bottle-neck the worst in many years.

Allegheny Air Gets Nonstop On Four Routes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board expanded its Allegheny Airlines route realignment investigation yesterday to consider prospective new authority for Allegheny and for other airlines.

The board ruled that the investigation would include whether:

Allegheny should be allowed to operate nonstop between Cleveland and Detroit, between Pittsburgh and Detroit, between Pittsburgh and New York-Newark and between Pittsburgh and Boston.

Northwest Airlines should be allowed to operate nonstop between Pittsburgh and New York-Newark and between Pittsburgh and Boston. Northwest does not now serve Boston.

Lake Central Airlines should be authorized to operate nonstop between Pittsburgh and Buffalo and between Pittsburgh and Baltimore.

Oil City-Franklin, Pa., should be added to Mohawk Airlines' route between Pittsburgh and Syracuse, N.Y.

Ohio Board Leaves Tax Question Open

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A state board turned down yesterday a recommendation by Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe to cancel Ohio's tax reciprocity agreement with Pennsylvania.

Instead, the State Reciprocity Board called on Gov. James A. Rhodes and Pennsylvania Gov. Raymond Shafer for further negotiations to settle a dispute arising from a Pennsylvania plan to impose its so-called "road tax" on Ohio truckers.

Saxbe was out of state due to the illness of his mother, but staff members presented his recommendation to the board. Carl R. Johnson, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, and Highway Safety Director Warren C. Nelson made up a quorum of the three-member board.

Theodore K. High, special counsel for the attorney general, said Saxbe requested cancellation of the agreement in the hope it would lead to a U.S. Supreme Court test of so-called "retaliatory" taxes among the states.

High said Pennsylvania's decision to impose the tax resulted from payment by Pennsylvania truckers of Ohio's axle-mile tax. The Ohio tax is prohibited by statute from being included in reciprocity agreements with other states.

Johnson pointed out that "even if we do nothing," the way still will be open for a court test of the Pennsylvania tax. He said litigation could be started by any Ohio carrier on which the tax is imposed.

Johnson also questioned whether cancellation might not mushroom into a dispute that would affect drivers of private automobiles and all vehicles traveling from Ohio to Pennsylvania and vice versa.

"I personally would hesitate to take any action in the face of such a delicate situation," Johnson said. "I agree," Nelson commented.

Pennsylvania's "road" tax actually is a state tax on fuel used to operate commercial vehicles while they are in Pennsylvania. It is calculated on the basis of mileage reports turned in by the carriers, and they are given credit for any fuel they purchase in Pennsylvania.

Railroad Unions Ask 7 Per Cent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six railroad unions reportedly demanded a 7 per cent wage increase yesterday, considerably above the 5 per cent recommended by a presidential emergency board.

Informed sources said that in addition to the 7 per cent wage demand for some 135,000 workers the unions also demanded an extra 15 cents per hour increase for skilled machinists, who make up some 70 per cent of the workers involved on more than 100 railroads.

The six unions have threatened a strike April 12.

Chief Railroad negotiator J. E. (Doc) Wolfe said after a brief meeting with union representatives that "they didn't make a proposition that we could discuss."

Wolfe declined to say whether this meant he considered the union's demands excessive.

Members of the six unions now average about $2.90 per hour and top skilled machinists earn $3.04 per hour.

Union sources said even if the railroads granted the new demands, which would bring the machinists up to about $3.75 per hour, they would still be substantially behind union members doing similar work in other industries.

The unions also reportedly rejected the recommendation of the presidential emergency board to make a job evaluation study and set up a special escrow fund to increase the wages of higher skilled railroad workers.

The board did not specify how much money should go into the escrow fund and union sources referred to it as "an empty pot."

Another meeting is scheduled between the unions and the Railroad negotiators today.

Assembly Considers Tax Share Scheme

HARRISBURG (AP) — A resolution aimed at getting a share of federal tax revenues for the states was introduced in the House yesterday with the strong support of Gov. Shafer.

Rep. Alvin C. Bush, R-Lycoming, and Majority Leader Lee A. Donaldson Jr., R-Allegheny, presented the proposal to Chief Clerk Adam T. Bower while the General Assembly was in recess.

Meanwhile, House Speaker Kenneth B. Lee, R-Sullivan, mailed copies of the resolution to all members of the House, noting that any of them may join as co-sponsors when the legislature reconvenes next week.

Shafer earlier had announced that the proposal would be offered and that copies would be sent to the governors in 49 other states, urging them to support similar resolutions in their legislatures.

The resolution would petition Congress to call a convention to write an amendment to the U.S. Constitution to make it mandatory for a portion of federal tax revenue to be turned over

Manufacturing Company Sets Franklin Plant

FRANKLIN, Pa. (AP)—The Joy Manufacturing Co. said yesterday it has arranged to lease a plant near Franklin for expansion of its coal machinery manufacturing facilities.

The one-story brick plant, built in 1962, is in the Venango County Industrial Development Corporation's industrial park along Route 8 near Reno.

Joy said it will borrow money from the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority to lease the plant from the Venango County group. Joy said that under terms of the lease it will have an option to buy the property.

40 States Okay DST

CHICAGO (AP) — Forty states—and possibly more—will shift to daylight saving time next month, a survey showed yesterday.

Texas legislators voted Tuesday to go along with the switch. So did those in Tennessee.

That means Georgia also will join the great majority in putting clocks ahead one hour at 2 a.m. April 30. Georgia's legislature had decided earlier to go on daylight time if four of five contiguous states do so. Tennessee, North Carolina and Alabama have come into the DST fold, and South Carolina is almost certain to do so.

A law enacted by Congress directs all states to observe daylight time from 2 a.m. the last Sunday in April until 2 a.m. the last Sunday in October.

But any state can exempt itself by adopting legislation to that effect.

April 1—Saturday—is the deadline for states to act on exemption. But the Federal Transportation Department, which supervises the new law, said it isn't planning any crackdown this year.

TO HEAD RESERVE BOARD

Martin Reappointed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson ended guessing in financial circles yesterday by reappointing controversial William McChesney Martin Jr. as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

A symbol of "sound money" in the financial world at home and abroad but anathema to "soft money" advocates, Martin will continue as chairman of the board until Jan. 30, 1970.

Friends and foes alike had awaited anxiously Johnson's decision on whether to allow Martin to remain as chairman of the board.

Some of Martin's most vigorous critics are congressional Democrats. They include Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, and Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. In particular, the critics have blamed Martin for higher interest rates.

Defenders of Martin, and fiscal conservatives generally, contend that the reserve board has voted both ways on monetary policy — with the voting entirely on economic conditions at the time, Martin noted in recent congressional testimony.

Stock Prices Mixed; Morning Up. Then Down

By ED MORSE
NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market backed away from an irregular early gain and took a moderate loss yesterday. Trading was fairly active.

Volume was 3,443 million shares compared with 3,944 million Tuesday.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 4 1/2 to 87.

Concern that the coming flood of first-quarter earnings reports would compare unfavorably with those a year ago was among the depressing factors cited as the market entered the final session of March.

Usually, the news of lower earnings is mirrored by lower stock prices. Some analysts said, however, that the market probably discounted the drop in earnings many weeks ago. There was nothing secret about them.

In any event, it was a losing session for the market but a completely undramatic one.

Of 1433 issues traded, 592 declined and 587 advanced. New highs for the year totaled 9; and new lows 5.

SCM Corp. wound up the day as most active stock, down 5 at 66 1/2 on 69,300 shares.

CAPITAL (CITY) IDEA

John Jordan, the new GOP state chairman, gave newsmen a demonstration of his motor scooter skill the other day. After a few false starts he got off all right. The scooter is his transportation from committee headquarters to the Capitol, two blocks away. His wife—well, she's not too happy about the whole idea.

President Ends CIA Covert Fund

By ROY REED

WASHINGTON — President Johnson directed the Central Intelligence Agency yesterday to end covert financing of private voluntary groups and ordered a study to find new ways of supporting such groups openly.

Ending the agency's connection with private voluntary organizations was part of a new government policy that will prohibit all undercover support by any agency, except in certain cases, the new policy rules out CIA use of private voluntary groups of an educational, philanthropic or cultural nature.

Under secretary of state Nicholas DeB Katzenbach, who headed a committee that formulated the new policy, said the committee had found that some groups still were receiving CIA support. But the number is "very, very, very small," he said.

The committee said that all such support could be ended by Dec. 31.

It recommended replacing the covert financing by an unspecified "public-private mechanism" that would operate openly. The president announced the formation of a new committee, headed by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, to formulate a mechanism.

The Katzenbach committee was appointed Feb. 15 in response to disclosures that the CIA was supporting student, labor, cultural and other organizations engaged in overseas programs.

The committee included John W. Gardner, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and Richard Helms, director of the CIA.

It recommended the following

State Woman Sought in Beating Death

LEVITTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Bristol Township police said yesterday a warrant has been issued for the arrest of a 48-year-old woman in connection with the beating death of a Levittown housewife and assaults on two children.

Police said the warrant names Mary S. Mamon of Levittown for arrest in connection with the death of Mrs. Lorraine Mullery, who was found bludgeoned last Saturday in her Levittown home.

Mrs. Mullery's son, Donald, 11, and a neighbor's child, 12-year-old Nancy Markham, were found badly beaten but alive in the house.

France Moves

Another Step With Submarine

CHERBOURG, France (AP) — France took another long step into the atomic age yesterday. President Charles de Gaulle launched the first French nuclear-powered submarine that will be able to deliver Polaris-type missiles when it becomes fully operational in '70.

De Gaulle glowed with pride and applauded heartily after the 7,900-ton Redoutable splashed into the gray waters off the Cherbourg naval arsenal. In presenting medals to workmen who aided in constructing the submarine, he called it an important day for France's defense and independence.

LEAVES LEFTISTS PLEASED

Italy Reacts to Pope

(c) N.Y. Times News Service ROME — Pope Paul VI's new encyclical, "Populorum Progressio" ("On the Development of Peoples"), with its strictures against excesses of capitalism, profit and private property, predictably pleased the Italian left and confused and offended the right.

Il Tempo, the conservative and Roman Catholic morning newspaper, seemed at a loss for comment on the economic, political and social aspects of the encyclical. The views expressed in a front page editorial appeared to represent a compromise between respect for the Pontiff and dislike of the "leftish" ideas he had expressed in Tuesday's encyclical on the need for radical measures to overcome the growing imbalance between the world's haves and have-nots.

"The numerous reserved illusions to liberalism belong certainly to those themes which we have held necessary to reserve for more mature deliberation," the editorial said. There was often a confusion, notably among "official Catholic economists," between political liberalism (in Italy the conservative party is called "liberal") and economic liberalism, it added. But the paper defended both, pointing out that the Common Market represented a 10-year triumph for economic liberalism and that the church itself benefited, in terms of religious freedom, under political liberalism.

The financial newspaper, Il Globo, generally reflecting the views of the Confindustria, Italy's association of manufacturers, was less reserved in its criticism. Its front page editorial said the encyclical pronounced historic and economic judgments on capitalism, colonialism and liberalism that "leave one much perplexed."

"Progress is closely tied to liberal capitalism, which, precisely because it is liberal, has been accessible to all and has distributed its fruits without distinction or discrimination," Il Globo said. "Against this system there is the collectivism which has failed everywhere, bringing to misery the countries and to slavery the peoples, depriving them of every liberty, first of all religious."

At the other end of the political spectrum, the Communist daily L'Unita headlined its front page encyclical story "The Crisis of Capitalist Society in the Social Encyclical of Paul VI."

"The condemnation of the profit theory as the essential mainspring of economic progress and the declaration of the failure of economic liberalism are associated in the encyclical with the condemnation of colonialism and neo-colonialism," L'Unita editorialist Antonello Trombadori wrote on the front page.

"Capitalism cannot insure the progress of the underdeveloped countries," was the headline on the Socialist daily, Avanti.

Most Italian commentators interpreted the Pope's words on demographic problems as an advance on previous church positions on birth control. Specifically, Senator Luigi Mariotti, Health Minister who has already set on foot measures to end the legal ban on dissemination and sale of contraceptive information and material, held that the Pope's recognition of this as a valid government activity was encouraging.

Tanker Bombed For Second Day

(c) N.Y. Times News Service LAND'S END, England — The wreck of the Torrey Canyon was hit with bombs and napalm and rockets and kerosene yesterday in a further effort to destroy the tanker and her remaining oil cargo.

At nightfall there were still bits of ship above water. The Royal Navy said its experts would have a look again at dawn, and there would be more bombing if necessary.

Tuesday's attack by Navy jets with 1,000-pound bombs—despite the huge flames and explosions they set off—failed to remove all the remains of the big ship from her resting-place on a reef 15 miles west of here.

Yesterday morning, seen from a plane, the Torrey Canyon looked like what she had become—a bombing target. The hull was blackened, the deck rent with huge holes. Of the bow portion all but a small piece had vanished.

But most of the stern section of the split tanker was still above water. The funnel was still visible. Two communications masts stood inconspicuously upright.

Most important, there was still a stream of dark brown moving from the wreck on the surface of the sea. It was thinner than it had been, but evidently there was still unburned crude oil in the hold.

Along the whole coast north and east of here, to St. Ives, heavy pools of the crude oil could still be seen in the water.

Elections Remain In Doubt

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The outcome of a campaign debate on President Johnson's Vietnam policy remained in doubt yesterday until 1899 absentee ballots are counted in a special election in Rhode Island's 2nd Congressional District.

The Democratic candidate, State Sen. Robert O. Tiernan, who gave wholehearted support to the administration on Vietnam, held a 485-vote margin in the count of Tuesday's balloting to choose a successor to the late Democratic Rep. John E. Fogarty.

James DiPrete, mayor of Cranston, the Republican candidate, called for a halt to the bombing of North Vietnam.

The vote tally, without absentee ballots:

Tiernan, 55,535; DiPrete, 55,050; and the Rev. Albert G. Perry of Providence, 306.

The Rev. Mr. Perry, a Unitarian-Universalist minister, called for the withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam.

South Vietnamese Holding Hostages

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
SAIGON—Saigon government militiamen are holding several South Vietnamese civilians prisoners until the Viet Cong release 15 persons they kidnapped last Sunday, a United States mission spokesman said last night.

The spokesman said that initially the militiamen had taken 100 persons from two villages about 350 miles northeast of Saigon. The old men and old women among the 100 were later allowed to return to their villages with a message to the Viet Cong that the others would be held until the 15 kidnapped persons, members of three militiamen families, were released.

The spokesman said the kidnapping occurred in the village of Phuyay, which is about three and a half miles northeast of Tamky, the capital of Quangtr province.

According to informed American sources, the two villages from which the 100 persons were taken were considered to be Viet Cong controlled. One village was three miles east of Tamky and the other was about seven miles northeast of the province capital. The names of the villages were not revealed.

The spokesman said that presumably the militiamen had acted under the command of the province chief.

In another incident, one civilian was killed and two others were wounded early Tuesday when a mine exploded under a cross country bus about 400 miles northeast of Saigon.

Not far from the site, a mine had exploded Monday killing two civilians and wounding three others.

Vietnamese Predicts War's End

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
SAIGON — Phan Khac Suu, the speaker of the constituent assembly, predicted yesterday that "some sort of settlement" of the Vietnam war would be sought after this fall's elections by "all parties concerned."

The 62-year-old politician, who disclosed earlier yesterday that he would seek the presidency in the Sept. 1 balloting, said in an interview that the war would be "greatly intensified" between now and election day, but that peace efforts would follow.

"If I am elected," the speaker said, "I will stick to my objective, which is not to have communism in South Vietnam. But we cannot solve the problems of war and peace alone. International influence on all our decisions will be overwhelming."

Suu also said he thought the reunification of North and South Vietnam, which is an article of faith with the present military government, would be impossible for at least a decade. "Only if the Communist regime in the north has disintegrated," he added, would reunification be feasible.

No Need To Cry

The king is dead, long live the king!

This is the attitude I think Jim Hayes should have accepted in writing his article on the Kinzua Dam that appears in the April issue of Field and Stream. His lament over the loss of "one of the most splendid wild and untamed rivers in the United States" is a bit biased. Jim fails to take into account the vastly increased recreational potential brought about by the impounded waters for many thousands of boaters, campers, hikers, sightseers, picnickers, and even the fisherman.

I know for a fact that his sorrows are not generally shared by the experienced river fisherman. For these inveterate rodbenders have already learned that the Kinzua Dam is providing a number of sensational "hot spots" that outclass even the most famed eddies eliminated by the flooding.

A good example is the tremendous fishing that could be had last season at Roper Hollow where the free-flowing waters of the river poured into the limited impoundment of the "low level" recreational pool maintained by the Corps of Engineers last summer. Common reports were "fifty-two bass in four hours of fishing" or "my limit of walleyes in less than three hours." While at the same time eddies above the impounded section were producing no more than the usual catches of fish.

To a lesser degree, the same phenomenal catches were being made where the waters of Kinzua Creek, Sugar Run, Willow Creek and other tributaries emptied into the impoundment. And it is reasonable to expect that as the population of the various species increases these hot spots will become general throughout the full area of the impoundment.

Like Hayes, I will miss those favorite eddies and riffles of the upper stretches of the river (especially that spot in the Indian Reservation where a limit of fat rainbows could usually be creel) where thirty-odd years of fishing produced a wealth of memorable experiences. Attachments of this order are not easily discarded. But in the interest of having the improved fishing I think the Kinzua Dam will provide, I will sacrifice the nostalgia.

And I think Jim almost gets around to sacrificing his nostalgia at mid-point in his article when he describes the fishing to be had in the tailwater of the dam. He writes: "I tied on a wobbling spoon and began casting. On my sixth cast I hooked and lost a small bass, and two casts later tied into a 2-pounder. Lex tried bottom-bouncing with a jig and immediately hooked a fat walleye. In a half-hour's fishing we each caught five or six smallmouths, and Lex landed three more walleyes. Ken (Corey) and I tied for honors with a pair of 3-pound bronzebacks."

Jim can't tell me that he ever had better luck than this at Big Bend (where the dam is now located) or any of the other upstream eddies in just a half-hour of fishing. And the fact is that even this amount of luck could be considered only mediocre for the fabulous tailwaters of the Kinzua Dam. On one occasion, I myself landed eleven walleyes in an hour and twenty minutes one night. On several other occasions I have had the bass eat up a bucket of fifty minnows before the walleyes started to bite. It could be that Jim and his pals hit the tailwaters on a slow night.

Jim passes over two of the most important of the Kinzua Dam fishing potentials rather lightly. In writing of his second visit to the tailwaters, he says: "The bass and walleyes went on the prowl just at dusk. For an hour we were in business almost constantly, catching and releasing fish up to 3 pounds. It was nearly dark when a muskie slammed into Lex's surface lure and took off downriver. It was not a big one as muskies go, maybe 10 pounds, but these river tigers don't have to be record breakers to start the adrenalin pumping. This one tore off 30 yards of line, wallowed on the surface, head shaking, and threw the hook."

The fact is, there are few places anywhere where there are so many muskies concentrated in such a small area of water as in the tailwaters of the Kinzua Dam. This fact, I think, should have been stated.

And Jim fails to mention that some sizeable rainbows are starting to gather in the boiling waters of the dam's discharge. When I last fished the tailwaters in December I hooked (and released) four "bows" in three days, the smallest one about sixteen inches. Jim Hetrick also landed four or five fishing jigs, all sizeable fish.

So when Hayes writes, "The good Lord giveth, and the Army Engineers taketh away," I don't quite agree. If anything, the Kinzua Dam is the answer to a fisherman's prayer, and a lot of other outdoorsists might find it a pleasurable spot to visit. If we have lost a "wild and untamed" river, we have at least gained a huge, prolific lake. A fair exchange anytime.

Hard-Hitting Braves Lack Punch, Lose by One Again

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Atlanta Braves continued to have one-run trouble yesterday, losing their eighth exhibition game by that margin, 3-2 to Houston when the Astros' Joe Morgan hit an eighth-inning homer.

Larry Dierker of Houston and Atlanta's Tony Cloninger each worked the first seven innings and yielded two runs. Doug Rader also hit a bases-empty homer for the Astros.

Don Clendenon's two homers, plus two 10th-inning runs on three hits and a sacrifice fly, paced Pittsburgh past the Chicago White Sox 6-4. Bob Veale worked the first six innings for the winners, giving up Ken Berry's grand slam homer in the third.

Harmon Killebrew hit his fifth homer of the spring, a leadoff shot in the fourth, as Minnesota blanked Washington 5-0 behind the pitching of Dave Boswell, Jim Perry and Al Worthington.

In other games, Boston topped St. Louis 10-9; the Los Angeles Dodgers edged Kansas City 3-2; the New York Mets downed Cincinnati 5-3; Cleveland eked by California 2-1; Detroit topped Philadelphia 6-2 and the San Francisco-Chicago Cubs game was canceled because of rain.

Carl Yastrzemski hit two homers and drove in six runs and Joe Foy doubled home three more in Boston's victory. Mike Shannon of St. Louis drove in four runs on a pair of homers and two singles. Orlando Cepeda also homered for St. Louis.

Bob Bailey hit a two-run homer in the first inning in Los Angeles' victory over Kansas City. Don Drysdale pitched the first six innings for the Dodgers, giving up both Kansas City runs.

Youngsville Meet Set for Old-Timers

It has been announced that the meeting scheduled for this Sunday of the Youngsville Old Timers has been rescheduled for Thursday, April 6, at the Youngsville American Legion at 7:30 p.m.

Los Angeles centerfielder Willie Davis sprained his left ankle while trying to steal second and will be sidelined for seven to nine days.

The Mets scored all five runs in the fifth inning off Cincinnati's Mel Queen, as seven men got hits, including Ron Swoboda who tripled.

Two unearned runs in the fifth inning gave Cleveland its victory. The second one came home when shortstop Jackie Hernandez fumbled Gus Gil's groundout. Rich Reichardt homered for California.

Detroit broke a 1-1 tie in the eighth inning when the Tigers scored three times on doubles by George Kintner and Dick McAuliffe and three singles.

Ever-Growing Greensboro Tournament Opens Today

By KEN ALYTA
Associated Press Sports Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament, a modest little $5,000 number at its inception in 1938, bursts on the spring scene today carrying a $125,000 tag, the biggest thus far this year on the professional tour.

Most of the top cash collectors have gathered here to match strokes in the quest for the top prize of $25,000 that goes to the winner after 72 holes have been completed Sunday afternoon.

Winners of eight of the 10 weekly tournaments held to date since January are on hand. They include double winners Arnold Palmer and Julius Boros, and Bob Goalby, Doug Sanders, Tom Nieporte and Dan Sikes.

Gary Player, the little South African, is another top notcher on the scene.

Then there's Sam Snead, Old Sam will be 55 in May and has won this tournament eight times, including the 1938 inaugural. Sam wasn't too old to win here two years ago and always is a threat in Greensboro, where he also has had nine second- or third-place finishes.

Sanders has been acquiring a Greensboro reputation in his own right. He won last year in play off with Tom Weiskopf, lost a 1964 playoff to Boros and won in 1963.

Most notable absentees are Jack Nicklaus, preparing to defend his Masters title next week, Billy Casper and Gay Brewer.

Limestone Leaders Announced

Leaders in the Limestone Lanes annual tournament have been announced.

Leading in the Class A doubles are Jake Apple and Grant George with a total of 1218. Jake Mascaro and Clyde Hannah are second with a score of 1184.

In the Class B doubles the leaders are Fred Miller and Jim Latimer with a score of 1155. Ted Alho and Bob Reese are second with a score of 1115.

Class A singles leaders is Clyde Hannah with a score of 613.

Ted Alho has a 615 to lead the Class B bowlers. Jake Mascaro has a 583 to rank second. All the scores above are handicapped totals.

Some of the better scratch totals show Grant George rolling a 223-624 in the doubles event. Others' top scores are Don Parr with a 225-567 and Clyde Hannah with a 221-544 series.

It was announced that the tournament will run for another couple of weeks.

Ever with Raise and Contract Bill Russell Looks for More

BOSTON (AP) — Armed with a new one-year contract and a pay raise, Bill Russell will lead the Boston Celtics into the National Basketball Association's Eastern Division finals tomorrow night.

The Celtics will be taking on the Philadelphia 76ers, the team they finished second to in the Eastern Division during the regular season. The best-of-seven series begins in Philadelphia.

Boston made the finals Tuesday night, defeating the New York Knickerbockers 118-109 and winning the semifinal playoffs three games to one.

Russell got the word on next year just before that game in Madison Square Garden. Top officials of the team met with Russell, a star of the team since 1956, and announced the decision.

Russell would be back next year in his dual role of player-coach and with a "substantial increase" in salary. Figures weren't mentioned but the 33-year-old Russell reportedly is getting $125,000 this year, his first as coach.

Russell still had one year to go on a three-year contract as a player. The new contract adds the coach role for that year.

ILLINOIS' NEW COACHES

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

Associated Press Sports Writer
CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Scandal-scattered Illinois appointed two of its former athletic stars, Jim Valek and Harv Schmidt, as head football and basketball coaches, respectively, yesterday.

Valek, 40, assistant football coach at South Carolina, and Schmidt, 31, assistant basketball coach at New Mexico, were given one-year contracts as replacements for resigned Pete Elliott and Harry Combes.

Elliott and Combes, along with assistant basketball coach Howie Braun, resigned March 19, two days before the deadline given Illinois by the Big Ten to fire the three or face indefinite suspension from the conference.

Valek, who also held assistant football coaching jobs at Army, Illinois and Wichita, and Schmidt, assistant the past three seasons to basketball coach Bob King of New Mexico, were introduced at a news conference by new Illinois Athletic Director, Gene Vance.

The appointments, hurried by approach of spring football practice, still await formal approval at the April 19 meeting of the school's board of trustees.

Vance, once a fellow coach of Valek's at LaSalle-Peru (Ill.) High School, commented:

"I'm extremely proud in announcing these two appointments. The university has been through much in the last four months.

"We are now going forward and not looking back and we'll have a balanced athletic program within the rules."

Asked if the one-year contracts of the two coaches contain a clause that they abide by Big Ten and NCAA regulations, Vance said:

"I'm not sure, but if it's not in there, it will be put in."

Valek, a rugged end who lettered on four Illinois football teams from 1945 through 1948, has been an assistant under Paul Dietzel since 1961, first at Army and last season at South Carolina.

"As far as I am concerned, the Illinois situation ($21,000 slush fund scandal uncovered by the school itself Dec. 16) is a closed book," said Valek, a native of Joliet, Ill.

"I'm not going to use the resignation of Pete Elliott to work on the sympathies of any prospective athletes. There is no way of knowing how reaction from the prospects will be in this regard."

Both Valek and Schmidt, Illinois basketball captain in 1957 and former prep star at Kankakee, Ill., stressed their recruiting will be concentrated within the state of Illinois.

Schmidt, who played with the Denver Truckers after a brilliant Illinois career and who toured Russia in 1958 with an all-star AAU basketball team, said the replacement of Braun as his assistant probably would be "an established Illinois high school coach."

"I'll concentrate recruiting within the state of Illinois," said Schmidt. "Any outside recruiting would be undertaken with a strong common-sense approach. If there is any, it would mainly be aimed at getting a boy with height."

Heavyweight Battle In Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Floyd Patterson and Bill McMurray, two men waging an uphill battle for a shot at the heavyweight boxing title, met in a 10-round bout.

Patterson, 32, of Marlboro, N.Y., is struggling back from a sound thumping by Cassius Clay in a 1955 title match. Clay stopped Patterson in the 12th round.

Since the former two-time heavyweight king has knocked out Henry Cooper and Willie Johnson, his overall record is 45-5 with 34 knockouts.

For McMurray, 29, of Sacramento, Calif., the fight presents an opportunity to make a big improvement in a spotty record.

McMurray is ranked 10th by the World Boxing Association with a 21-16-2 record and seven knockouts, the latest coming in the seventh round over Thad Spencer.

In his last fight in January, McMurray lost a split decision to Henry Clark.

McMurray will take a height and weight advantage into the ring against Patterson. He is 5-foot-4 and expects to weigh 210. Patterson, who is 6-foot even, expects to weigh under 200 pounds.

The anticipated attendance for the fight is 7,000.

TROPHY WINNERS

Cliff Anderson, of St. Joseph's College, on the left, and Bobby Lloyd of Rutgers were presented trophies at the Philadelphia Basketball Writers Club on Tuesday. Anderson was named the top player in the Big 5 in Philadelphia, Lloyd, who was named to numerous All-America teams, was picking up the trophy for his coach Bill Foster. Foster was named the outstanding coach of the year.

Russian Skaters Unbeaten In Ice Hockey Tournament

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Russia's hockey team whipped Czechoslovakia 4-2 and stormy scenes last night and finished the world tournament unbeaten.

The final period erupted into fist fights and seven players were in the penalty box at one time—four Russians and three Czechs. Earlier, Sweden upset a jaded Canadian team 6-0 to take the silver medal. Canada finished third.

The Swedish triumph relegated the United States team, which finished its schedule Tuesday, to fifth place but assured the Americans an automatic berth in next winter's Olympic Games.

The brawl came at 16:36 of the final period, when the Czechs were trailing 2-4 and striving to close the gap.

A shot flew wide of the Russian goal and suddenly the players of both teams were fighting it out along the boards.

Alexander Ragulin, the big Russian defenseman, was right in the thick of it, swinging punches and struggling to get free as players and referees tried to restrain him.

At the medal presentation afterwards the Russian National anthem was drowned in jeers and whistles. The crowd went on demonstrating as the Russians, with Ragulin among them, skated around the rink with the cup. It was Russia's fifth straight title.

The defeat was Canada's worst in world hockey competition in the past four years. A pair of goals by Stisse Johanson in a little over four minutes midway of the first period took all of the starch out of the Canadians.

Pag Top Catcher

Catcher Jim Pagliaroni topped the National League receivers last year with a .397 fielding mark while Pitcher Vernon Law led the pitchers in fielding percentage. The Deacon handled 47 chances perfectly for a 1,000 mark.

Clay Has Until April 28, Running Out of Loopholes

HOUSTON (AP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay suffered a one-two punch setback yesterday in his fight to avoid being drafted into the U.S. Army.

First, the Houston draft board ordered him to report for induction April 28.

Shortly thereafter, a U.S. District Court at Louisville, Ky., refused to delay his induction on grounds of racial discrimination.

TMO Cagers Ousted from Playoffs

JAMESTOWN — The Warren Times Mirror and Observer basketball team was eliminated from the Taft Recreation League playoffs on Tuesday night by the Sportsmen's Cafe 54-53, it was reported last night.

A basket by Robby Ensarri, his only bucket of the night, put the clincher on the game for the locals. His two-pointers came in the final 15 seconds of play and gave the Sportsmen a three point lead. The locals got a basket, but still fell a point short.

Warren led throughout most of the first three quarters. At the end of three periods they were trailing 42-40.

A big first period gave the Times Mirror and Observer a 12-6 edge. With both teams scoring 16 points in the second period the score was 28-22 in favor of Warren at the intermission.

Leading the attack for the Times Mirror and Observer was Bob Winterburn with 16 points. Jack Karkosky and Ron Isackson added 15 and 14 points respectively.

Tom Precht led the winners with 17 points. He is a former Niagara University cager.

Both teams made 23 field goals. From the foul line Warren made good on seven out of eight shots while the Sportsmen connected on eight of nine, to make the difference in the game.

Warren concluded its season with an 8-11 record.

tion. Clay could not be reached for comment but his Houston attorney indicated the champion would continue his efforts to avoid induction on the grounds he is a Muslim minister.

A Houston draft board spokesman said Clay's induction notice was sent out in the morning mail yesterday shortly after his draft board status change request from Louisville was received by the local board.

The Louisville board had set April 11 as the induction date but Clay received the delay by having his case referred to Houston which he now claims as his home.

"There was an April 28 call already set up before we received approval of his request to be in our jurisdiction," a Houston Draft Board spokesman said.

"There are several others included in the call. He received no special privileges nor penalties."

At Louisville Judge James F. Gordon declined to create a three-man panel to hear Clay's contention that discrimination was involved because no Negroes were on the board there when he was called up.

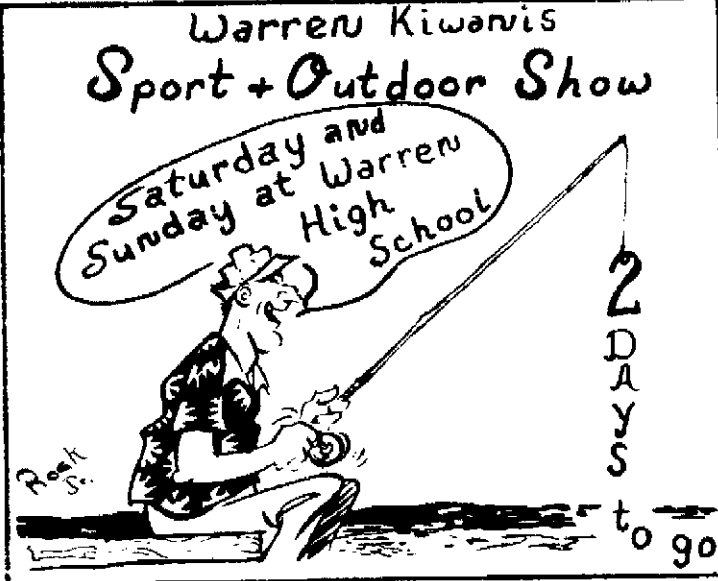

The Louisville federal court action followed rejection Tuesday by a three-judge federal court in Cincinnati on Clay's bid for a court order to keep him from being drafted.

The court denied the motions because his problems were to be reviewed Wednesday by the federal court in Louisville which also refused to order a delay. "The next step is up to the champ," said (attorney) Hodges, Clay's Houston lawyer, when told of the new induction date. "We'll cross that bridge when we get there."

The 25-year-old unbeaten Clay has contended he would suffer "irreparable harm" if drafted and would lose at least $460,000 in purse money for three fights in the future.

Talks about future fights have been suspended, his managers said earlier this week.

ELEVENTH IN A SERIES

White Sox: Need Hitters

By JACK HAND

Associated Press Sports Writer SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — The pitcher-rich Chicago White Sox may be forced to trade a front line starter to get more hitting into the bunt, scurry and slide attack.

Manager Ed Stanky can parade out seven starters who have known success in the majors, plus a well-named bullpen. But the attack still lacks muscle.

"Tommy Agée and Ken Berry carried us with their hitting last year," said Stanky. "Don Buford did his bit with the base running and the pitchers did the rest."

"We're not looking for home run hitters. We want the .270-.280 hitter who can drive in runs. Pete Ward fell off last year when he was injured but we know he can hit and we want to get his bat in the lineup."

Duane Josephson, the 24-year-old rookie catcher whose credentials include a .324 year on the Indianapolis farm, is the brightest prospect in camp. However, he had to go the hospital for eight stitches in his head after he was hit by the back of the swing of Frank Howard of Washington in a recent exhibition game. Stanky figures Josephson is going to stick around for several years as the club's catcher.

"I'm not going to have any specialist to catch Hoyt Wilhelm's knuckler," said Stanky. "The kid has been okay on knucklers. J. C. Martin always has done the job and Gerry McNertney can handle Wilhelm, too."

With Smoky Burgess, the chunky 40-year-old pinch hit specialist coming out of retirement, Stanky is well fortified behind the bat.

Stanky's infield depends on the ability of Ron Hansen, his shortstop, to come back after a disc operation. So far, Ron has been having no trouble and the Sox are optimistic that he can team up with Jerry Adair as a first class double play combination. Adair had to move over to short part of the time last year after he was acquired from Baltimore.

First base still is up for grabs among Moose Skowron, Tommy McCraw and Ward. However, it is likely that Stanky will have to sacrifice a little defense and play Ward at third base at least part of the time.

Agée, the American League Rookie of the Year, and Berry are set in the outfield. The third spot can go to Walt (No Neck) Williams if he can hit big league pitching like he paddled the ball at Tulsa, .330, last year.

Williams suffered a fracture of his right wrist in Puerto Rico during the winter and lost valuable time. He has just started to play regularly. Ed Stroud, .309 at Indianapolis, and Bill Voss, .252 at Indianapolis, are other candidates.

The sick batting averages are of great concern to Stanky, who remembers well the .231 team average of 1966, poorest in the league. Despite the best pitching staff in the league, the Sox finished fourth by 15 games.

Those averages included Skowron, .249; Adair, .249; Hansen, .176 in 23 games; Ward, .219, and Martin, .255. Agée led the club with .273, 22 homers and 44 stolen bases. Berry showed improvement at .271. Buford stole 51 bases but hit only .244.

Change of Opinion

(c) N. Y. Times News Service

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. — After Billy Herman, the manager of the Boston Red Sox, had installed the rookie shortstop, Rico Petrocelli, as his varsity regular in 1965, the skipper of the gold hose was lavish with his praise. In no time at all he was comparing the 21-year-old boy with his old double-play partner on the Cubs, Billy Jurgens.

"I played alongside of Jurgens for a long time," said the former second base wizard, "and Rico reminds me of him. The Red Sox had been looking for a crack shortstop for a long while. They can stop looking. We've got one. Rico can be the best shortstop in the league."

But the rapport between the manager and his budding young star began to fade. Moody, temperamental and perhaps injury-prone, Petrocelli did not play every day and Herman made no attempt to conceal his belief that Rico was malingering on the job. It reached such a point that the manager demanded of the front office last season that Rico be traded. By September Herman seemed to sense impending disaster.

"If I'm fired," said Billy to the press, "it will be because of Petrocelli." His dismissal came shortly thereafter. Was it cause and effect? At the very least their deteriorating relationship was a contributing factor.

The split reached violent cleavage one night in July. Rico was uneasy when he left home for the ball park because his wife wasn't feeling well and he had to leave her alone with their 5-month-old baby.

"I worried about her all during the game," related Rico yesterday, "and by the eighth inning I couldn't stand it any more. I went straight through the dugout runway to the clubhouse. 'I gotta go home,' I said to Buddy Leroux, our trainer. 'Don't do it,' he said. I told him to tell Herman and I left."

"Then I got home, I found my wife on the floor, doubled up with pain. I rushed her to the hospital and the diagnosis was a cyst near the appendix. The doctor told me she was lucky I brought her there so quickly. The next day the ballclub slapped me with a $1,000 fine, a tenth of my salary."

"I don't regret taking my wife to the hospital but I did a stupid thing in not telling Herman about it or asking his permission. I was wrong and I know it. But I didn't have enough confidence in Herman to go to him. Some managers you can talk to and they'll understand. I would do it with Dick Williams, our new manager. Guys like Hank Bauer or Ralph Houk are the same. But Herman was never like that."

"Maybe you won't believe me that I still like Billy. As for me costing him his job, that's silly. I'm no star. I know he wanted to trade me. But he also wanted to trade Yaz and Cong. He was talking, of course, about Carl Yastrzemski and Tony Conigliaro, who are stars, and there was just the proper note of incredulity in his voice when he placed himself on the trade bait level with the two brilliant young outfielders. Part of the Herman disenchantment with Petrocelli was due to the fact that the shortstop came up ailing too often for the manager's taste. Some observers are convinced that Rico was a hypochondriac's concern with his health. The more fearless accuse him of gold-bricking on the job, "jaking" it as the ball players say.

"I never jaked in my life," stated Rico indignantly. "How about the time I had the abscess? I sat on a pillow on the bench and it was agony for me to move. One day I hit a drive off the fence against Earl Wilson of the Tigers and it should have been a stand-up double. I barely crawled to first."

"The other guys on the club knew I wasn't jaking. 'You're crazy to play,' Yaz told me. 'Why are you staying in there?' I said Jim Lomborg. The year before when I hurt my arm, I wanted to play but couldn't. I love to play ball. I even went into third when a muscle pull slowed me down too much at short."

Rico is a handsome young man of 23, a 175-pound six-footer who hails from Coney Island. He bore the he-can't-miss label from the start but his hitting has been slightly less than sensational as his averages of .232 and .238 attest. However, he can hit the long ball and had 18 homers last year. He's strictly a right-handed batsman although he once had tried switch-hitting in his final minor league year with Seattle.

"But that Fenway Park wall in left is too inviting," he said with a bright smile. "Mike Higgins hinted that I'd be better off forgetting about swinging from the left side of the plate. I took the hint."

At last Rico has an approachable and understanding manager in Dick Williams, a guy with a reputation of being able to soothe ruffled feathers. And the pampered pet from Fenway Park lead the league in ruffled feathers, if Petrocelli is going to make it as big as everyone once expected he would, this is the season for him to start.

Humphrey Assures Germany Treaty Does Not Prohibit

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
BONN — The United States has given written assurances to West Germany that the proposed nonproliferation treaty would not prohibit creation of a European nuclear force in event of political unification of Western Europe.

The assurances, according to informed sources, were contained in a letter sent in recent weeks to the Bonn government by the Johnson administration.

The communication, it was explained, was sent in response to a request from the West German government for clarification of the proposed treaty terms that have been worked out by the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

The purpose of the American move was to overcome some of the West German misgivings over the proposed treaty, which would prevent the acquisition of atomic weapons by any additional nations. One of the underlying German concerns has been that a treaty might create an obstacle to eventual political unification of Western European countries by preventing such a "United States of Europe" from acquiring the weapons needed in its own defense.

U.S. Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey arrived here yesterday on the first of two visits he will make to the West German capital during his two-week diplomatic mission to seven European countries. In his conversations with German officials, the Vice President will be emphasizing the Administration's interest in resolving current American-European differences over the treaty terms and seeking quick agreement on the treaty at the Geneva disarmament conference.

Partly because of the assurances on the European nuclear force, it is now the belief of informed sources directly involved in U.S.-German relations that the Bonn government will accept a nonproliferation treaty. A major problem yet to be resolved is the inspection provision, and U.S. officials here hope this question can be satisfactorily answered by establishing some formal relationship between the international atomic energy agency and the European atomic energy community in carrying out inspections in Western European countries.

The fact, however, that the U.S. has given such assurances in writing to the West German government on the European force could cause, in the opinion of some American disarmament new complications with the Soviet Union in agreeing on a treaty.

Sewage on Roads

The State Highways Department has announced a "get-tough" policy against property owners who permit discharge of sewage onto state highways. Property owners who fail to stop such discharge after they get registered letters may be brought before a justice of the peace.

WARREN, PA., THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1967

Cobham Fund Case Hearing Is Today

Litigation in the controversial will of Lord Henry and Ann Cobham continues this morning before Judge Alexander C. Flick Jr.

Under the will, the Salvation Army serves as trustee of the principal from the Cobham estate, which, due to investments made by the trustees now stands at $250,000.

The trust was to be used to provide both a home and an agricultural education for needy children.

The case has come before the court for the past 15 years. The trustees have indicated to the judge their desire to put the fund to use at Ivy House in Philadelphia, an orphanage sponsored by the Salvation Army with the education opportunities in agriculture also to be made available.

The heirs of the Cobham Estate want the $250,000 to remain in Warren County and charge this is a condition of the will.

The most recent development arose when the county commissioners, who also serve as trustees of the Hoffman estate, which supports the Hoffman Children's Home here, petitioned the court for the Cobham trust to remain in Warren County.

The commissioners have recommended a joint administration of the Hoffman Home by them and the trustees of the Cobham estate—the agricultural terms of the will to be carried out through programs available at both Youngsville and Eisenhower high schools.

The hearing picks up again at 9 a.m. today with rebuttal testimony, if any, summations and the submission of written briefs. Judge Flick will then study the testimony before handing down an opinion.

Youngsville Kiwanians See Golf Film

Youngsville Kiwanis Club members saw a movie, "Tips on Golfing," Tuesday evening. After dinner at their weekly meeting, Kiwanians saw 16 professional golfers give demonstrations, with commentary by Jim Demerest.

The movie was shown by the guest of the evening, Tom Meabon.

Among the pros on film were Arnold Palmer, Sam Snead, Julius Boros, and Gene Littler.

Roy Crandall announced that there would be an inter-club visit at 8:15 p.m. Monday, April 10, with the Corry club at the Hotel Corry.

UP GOES THE SPORT SHOW TENT

Workmen were busy yesterday afternoon as a tent 100 feet long went up behind Warren Area High School. The tent will be used for displays of boats and camping equipment at the Fourth Annual Kiwanis Sport and Outdoor Show today and tomorrow. There will be more displays inside the high school, entertainment and refreshments, and helicopter rides from the high school lawn. (Photo by Mansfield)

Tidioute Man Saved In Fall

A Tidioute man was treated for exposure and admitted to Warren General Hospital late Tuesday evening after he fell into the Allegheny River just below the Kinzua Dam.

The man, identified as Jon Druggan, 23, of Tidioute, erroneously listed as age 65 in yesterday's Times-Mirror and Observer, was employed as a mechanic on one of the coffer dams for the power project by the Humkin-Conkey Construction Co., when he reportedly fell off a wall, 15 feet into the river.

A fellow mechanic, John Schutt, 29, of Jamestown, N. Y., immediately dove into the river and pulled Druggan to the wall. A mobile crane was used to lower a sling to the two men who were lifted out.

The Tidioute man had to be carried for over 200 yards on a stretcher before he could be transported to the hospital. In the operation, Guy Bearfield, 36, of 10 Victory ave., Warren, also suffered a back injury and was treated at the hospital early yesterday morning.

Area Mechanic Loses Ear

CORRY — A local auto mechanic suffered a fractured skull, a slight concussion and lost part of his left ear Monday when a car on which he was working slipped off a front end alignment machine and fell on him.

Lawrence Sperry, 26, of Worth st., was taken to Corry Memorial Hospital and then transferred to Hamot Hospital in Erie for care by a specialist. He was working at Sehnman's Tire Service on West Main st., lining up the front end of the car when the accident occurred.

Sperry was working under the vehicle when it slipped, crashing down and hitting him along the left side of the head. A Hamot Hospital spokesman said Monday afternoon that Sperry is now under the care of a plastic surgeon.

Area Youth Acquitted

OLEAN, N. Y. — An 18-year-old youth, charged with wearing a Nazi military decoration in violation of the state penal law, was acquitted Tuesday by Peace Justice Ralph Goff.

Greenville Man Killed In Shop

GREENVILLE — Bessemer and Lake Erie Railroad officials yesterday were investigating the death of a 43-year-old employee of the railroad's repair shop here.

The victim was identified as F.M. Freeman, Shenango st., Greenville. Freeman was employed as switchman with the railroad for the past 17 years.

Company spokesmen said Freeman was run over at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday by a movable crane which is used to load and unload cars. The crane, according to officials, is mounted on wheels and moves slowly.

The company investigators are still unable to determine exactly how the accident happened.

Freeman reportedly is the father of seven children.

Annual Kiwanis Sport Show Enlists Over 50 Exhibitors

The fourth annual Kiwanis Sport and Outdoor Show will take place at Warren Area High School Saturday and Sunday. More than 50 exhibits will highlight the show from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Many prizes and a grand prize will be awarded. The grand prize, furnished by Northwest Savings and Loan Association, will be a 14 foot fiberglass boat and boat trailer. The grand prize drawing will be at 4:45 p.m. Sunday.

General admission fee is 50 cents for adults. Children less than 12 years old will be admitted free.

Helicopter rides will be available for $6 per person. Entertainment, furnished by exhibitors and the Cylonians, a unicycle act, will be free.

Among the show's attractions will be a style show, a golf clinic conducted by country club pro Ed Morgante, and glaucoma and diabetes clinics.

Prizes will include a fishing pole, a transistor radio, flashlights, cosmetics and a telescope, among many other items. Camping equipment, watercraft, motorcycles, trailers, sport clothing, garden equipment, leather goods, and guns will be among the displays of outdoor recreation equipment.

Bob Dilks, Kiwanis spokesman, said yesterday that the annual sport shows have been getting better and better. He said Kiwanians have been working on the show this year for about four months. Proceeds will be used for Kiwanis Club welfare projects, said Dilks.

This year the number of exhibits has gone up by 50 percent, said the Kiwanis spokesman.

Dave Winans, who works with Dilks on the show's publicity committee, said about 10,000 people attended last year's show. Attendance was heaviest on Sunday last year, he said. Kiwanis-sponsored Key Clubs from Warren and Eisenhower high schools will serve hot dogs and other refreshments at several different locations.

Winans said the show will more than fill the high school's exhibition areas. Both the auditorium and the gym will be used. Outside the school, a 100-foot-long tent was put up yesterday. It will be used for display of boats and camping equipment.

George and Russell Templeton, co-chairmen of last year's show, are serving as vice chairmen this year. They are assisting general chairman Cliff Terry.

Exhibiting at the sport show will be A&A Mobile Home Sales, Anderson's Baking, Bell Telephone, Bigelow's Leather Shop, Blueberry Hill Golf Club, C&S Cycle Shop, Carlson Body Works, Celebrations Unlimited, Cowdick's Drug Store, Dorrien Trailer Sales, El-Tronics, Gravely Sales & Service,

Discuss Kiwanians' Tax Returns

At the noon meeting yesterday, Kiwanis president Robert Frycklund discussed final arrangements for the Kiwanis Sports Show this weekend at Warren Area High School. Shurl Glass, partner in Swanson, Glass and Coates, certified public accountants, spoke to the club about income taxes. He said that husbands and wives must file separate returns for the new school income tax if both had earned income.

Glass explained how to plan to keep returns to a minimum by income averaging, deferred compensation, profit sharing and pension plans, tax free bonds and the 7 per cent investment tax credit.

Town Crier

... By Les Rickey

Warren could do well to look into a plan at New Haven, Conn., where the city has started compiling profiles of all residents of the community.

It works like this: any scrap of information, from dog licenses to divorce decrees, is cranked into a computer file. At a moment's notice, you could call it forth to find out a person's police record, tax status, income, and how many times he's sued his neighbor and what for.

I'm against the idea in principle, because it violates every concept of privacy known to man. But I'm fighting an increasingly strong current; everyone's going computer happy, hell-bent on looking into the lives of others. If this, then, is the way it has to be, the least we can do is adapt it to the democratic way of life.

Warren County could get one and hook it up to Dataphones in every home in the community as a voters' service in the primary election this spring. We could have a Dial-a-Candidate service.

You could get a good cross-file on every candidate seeking public office, from local level right up through the national. You could find out their military record, their Social Security record, the income tax returns for the last 20 years, their taxation level and whether their taxes are paid, how many times they've been garnished for tax payments, their traffic record, how many times they've been in court and for what, and what they've bought at county tax sales.

I know that most of these things are a matter of public record, but we can't have several thousand voters tramping into the courthouse and other offices to muck around the files. We could instead just dial the computer, then dial a coded number for the candidate, and find out all we need to know from a taped message.

It would change the face of politics forever. The cry would not be the traditional, "I have nothing to hide." It would become, "I can hide nothing."

How about that? Watch it, public official; Little Brother is watching you.

Highlight Sport Show

Cylonians

The whirlwind Cylonians, pictured here as they reach the big finale in their act, highlight the annual Kiwanis Sport Show Saturday and Sunday.

Presented by the Pennsylvania Bank and Trust, the team will give three shows in Warren Area High School Gymnasium on Saturday at 3, 5, and 8 p.m. In order to permit the Cylonians to leave for Anniston, Ala., where they open with Garden Circus on Monday, only one performance will be given on Sunday, at 2 p.m.

The Cylonians want all area bicycle riders to visit the sport show and see them work. But Charlie Van Buskirk, husky male member of the duo, states: "We don't want the children to rush home and try to duplicate our stunts on their bikes. It has taken many years of working out six hours a day to build up their routine."

The Pennsylvania Bank and Trust invites everyone to attend the Kiwanis Sports Show. It is urged that you arrive early to enjoy all the exhibits. There are plenty of seats in the huge gym, but the shows will start right on time.

Attack Denied

JAMESTOWN, N.Y. — Reports of an attack on a young boy in the restroom of a local theater were branded as strictly rumor Tuesday by Police Chief John Paladino.

The rumor has persisted for several days here and an investigation by police has resulted in nothing remotely resembling any kind of attack or molestation, police reported.

The police chief made the statement Tuesday after rumors were discussed in a local radio station's public participation program.

Kane Police Crack Down

OVER THE TOP! The Girl Scouts of District No. 4, Warren County have proudly reported that they sold a record 31,356 boxes of Girl Scout Cookies this year—That's a little over 2,000 more than the total sold last year, the average working out to an all-time high of thirty-four boxes of the cookies sold per Girl Scout. The week of April 6th is the delivery date for the cookies ordered. If, somehow, you were missed during the cookie sale campaign, now is your chance to make sure you don't miss out on the delectable, crunchiness of these five different kinds of Girl Scout cookies—They will be sold at the Warren Kiwanis Sports Show this Saturday and Sunday at the high school. NOW THAT WE ALL HAVE A TOUCH OF SPRING FEVER this suggestion for fixing breakfast cereal has an appeal it completely lacked when it first came in the mail. Here it is: Just spoon crisp, ready-to-eat cereal, such as whole wheat flakes, in parfait glasses, alternating with spoonfuls of vanilla ice cream and sliced, sweetened strawberries; garnish the tops with a few sliced berries. Now, to the menu add buttered toast, orange juice and a glass of milk—or a cup of coffee—and all the nutrients for a well balanced breakfast to start off the day are there.

SUNNY DAYS AND SPRING BREEZES have brought out all the shiny Christmas bicycles; riders are pedaling with much nerve and enthusiasm down almost every street in town, in traffic, especially on nice weekends, almost bumper to bumper. It crossed my mind, after watching two especially attractive youngsters on a tandem bicycle going down Fourth avenue on a recent Sunday, maneuvering in and out of traffic, that it would be so much more safe and sensible to allow them the use of the empty sidewalks. Excepting in the downtown area, long stretches of sidewalk are void of anything but a very occasional pedestrian. Back in other days, it was the street that had little traffic and the sidewalks were crowded but now that the situation is reversed it would seem logical, to me, to revise the rules regarding where bicycles may be ridden.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a young man who has been married less than three years. I guess I am a rotten husband, at least this is what my wife keeps telling me.

I have never received one word of encouragement from my wife about my work or my efforts around the house. No matter what I do, she tells me her father can do it better and that next time she'll call him and get it done right.

I have had three coffee dates with a very attractive girl at work. She tells me I'm great and she makes me feel like a man. I know I could easily get into trouble with this girl if I continued to see her, so I'm going to cut it out. Please tell me what I can do to get a decent response out of my wife. I am — OPEN FOR SUGGESTIONS.

DEAR OPEN: Your letter is unusual. Generally, this complaint comes from wives, not husbands. The yearning for approval knows no gender, however, and I am printing your letter to remind both husbands and wives that a few words of praise can bring magical results.

To you, sir, I pose this question: When did YOU last give your wife a verbal bouquet? As a rule, those who give—get.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I came upon this ad in the Saturday Review today. It was paid for by Harper and Row's Elementary-High School Textbook Division. I found it provocative and thought perhaps you might think it worthy of your column. Here it is:

"What does a teacher do all day?

"She's mother, father, warden, clergyman, traffic controller, philosopher, friend, psychologist. Maybe zoo-keeper, some days.

"Teachers don't mind. They welcome responsibility. But they would like a little something to go with it.

"Money, sure. But what about a little recognition? And a little understanding?

"According to some people, the teacher's job is to comfort the troubled, and trouble the comfortable. And other people say she is supposed to understand those not good at explaining, and explain to those not good at understanding.

"What would it take to get YOU to close yourself up in a room day after day with 30 high-spirited American youngsters?"—AN ANN FAN

DEAR FAN: Thank you for letting us all see this superb description of some of America's greatest heroines. The value of a good teacher is beyond calculation.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read your column every day and I'd like to know how you keep your sanity answering questions put to you by crackpots, screwballs and weirdos, not to mention people who are rude, vulgar, insulting and out to get your blood-pressure up.

Please reply in print. I'll bet others would like to know your secret, too. — MR. INQUISITIVE

DEAR MR.: For every crack-pot, screwball and weirdo there are at least 1,000 sincere, decent, warm-hearted people who are earnestly seeking help. I concentrate on these people and ignore the others.

Confidential to Take It Or Leave It?: My advice is to leave it. Chances are good that you will do better. My frank opinion is that you couldn't possibly do worse.

Want to get "no" to drinking without your buddies putting you down? Get cued in. Write for "Booze and You—For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

LACY'S CIRCUS PERFORMERS

These are the pupils of Mrs. Helen Launstein's Second Grades at Lacy Elementary School who are presenting a Children's Circus today and tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 at the school. The children have worked hard under the patient direction of their teacher and are eager to exhibit the results to all parents, relatives and interested friends. All are welcome, there is no admission charge. The children made tickets, but only for the fun of the art work involved. (Photo by Mel Mansfield)

Today And Tomorrow Circus Days At Lacy Elementary School

Six weeks of study will culminate today and tomorrow in the actual presentation of twenty circus acts and a grand finale put on by Second Graders at Lacy Elementary School. The audience is to be made up of the children of the school, parents and friends of Lacy School, as well as the pupils of the two second grades at Jefferson Elementary School, at 1:30 on both days.

In these past weeks the Second Graders have been working on a circus unit in relation with their basic work. The pupils have learned about the circus from ancient to modern times.

True stories were read of people and animals connected with the circus; the true stories of clowns being particularly enjoyable to the children.

Each child read four library books; other sources of information were the reading text, encyclopedias and movies. They wrote both true and original stories and illustrated them, then put them in tent-shaped booklets.

Each child learned 50 circus spelling words and their test papers were put in little booklets shaped like clowns. These words were a great help in writing the stories.

A giraffe called "Speedy" helped with Math. Each child's name was put on a spot on his body when he had mastered the 100 addition and 100 subtraction combinations and could write the answers in five minutes. Math was also used in measuring, learning about time, days and months, computing the number of tickets to make and the number of seats needed for each performance.

The art work consisted of large circus murals, a merry-go-round with giraffes and elephants made from paper plates, a tree cage with monkeys made from tubes, milk carton horses, small animals in circus wagons, and large animals from painted cardboard boxes.

Clowns were much in evidence—life-sized ones made of crepe paper, balloon head ones on painted paper plates and clown alley with large drawn figures and those made of construction paper.

The sounds of the circus were taught through songs, sung and acted. The piano, records and toy orchestra instruments were used for accompaniment.

The circus will include the traditional parade, a tight-rope walker, snake charmer, strong man, two-headed gal, a queer animal, a lion act, elephant act, monkey act, pony act, and of course, many clowns.

There will be a chalk talk to explain the work which goes in-

SOUTHERN CHURCH 'CRISIS' NEW YORK (AP) — Educated sensitive people are finding it "hard to accept the simplism which prevails" in popular Southern churches, says the Rev. Dr. Samuel S. A Southern Baptist and head of the university's religion department, he writes in a new book, "Southern Churches in Crisis," published by Holt, Rinehart and Winston.

NEW YORK (UPI) — This year marks the 25th anniversary of the beginning of the cereal enrichment program in the United States, the American Dietetic Association reports.

To be labeled "enriched," a food must contain added nutrients in kinds and amounts established by the Food and Drug Administration. Originally, standards were for enrichment with thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, and iron for flour and white bread. Later, levels for calcium enrichment were established, and standards were extended to cover cornmeal, farina, macaroni and noodle products, plus milled rice.

Hints From Heloise

Rice, A New Way

Dear Food Lovers:

At a friend's home the other night, I was served instant rice in a delicious new way. She showed me how she fixed it by bringing the water to a boil, pouring in some frozen peas (according to the amount of rice being made), bringing the water back to a boil, stirring it once with a fork, then putting in the pre-cooked rice.

Not only did it add something green to plain white rice, but made it crunchily . . . especially yummy with gravy poured over it.

The boiling water cooks the peas and after the lid is put on the rice, it steams them perfectly. Absolutely on Cloud Nine.

Heloise

P. S. And if you're real cute, you'll put about five drops of yellow food coloring in that water before you dump in the rice.

It looks like it's loaded with butter, makes the rice yellow and, oh, what a difference it makes!

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

For a budget-baby shower (where money is at a minimum) favors can seem quite expensive.

Here is a cute idea:

Make tiny three-cornered diapers out of pink and blue flannel, fold the regular way and secure them with tiny gold safety pins.

Then dip these in paraffin and when they harden a bit open the top of the diapers and shape them.

When cold and firm, mints or nuts can be placed inside for each guest.

A silver pin may be placed on one container and the person who gets it receives the door prize.

Shirley Netherton

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's what to do if you have trouble getting glass curtains to hang right.

I washed mine and hung them up damp. Then I pinned the pleats in place.

Now, here comes the finishing touch!

I sprayed them all over with starch and let dry.

Then I removed the pins and had beautiful even pleats that will stay in place until they have to be washed again.

Mrs. Sheila Moore

DEAR HELOISE:

I saw the hint in your column about cutting the top of a sock off to make sweaters for teen-age fashion dolls.

I have found use for the whole sock. The toe makes a doll's cap. By cutting just in front of the heel, you can make a sleeveless beach jacket by just cutting armholes, leaving on the heel for the hood.

Pam Godfrey

DEAR HELOISE:

I have found an easy way to handle curlers while putting up someone else's hair.

I lay a towel over a pulled-out drawer and dump the curlers on top of it. They will be at arm's reach.

When ready to put 'em away, I just push the towel and all into the curler bag and draw it out leaving the curlers inside.

There's no mess this way and it's quite handy.

Opening lead Four of ♠
A decisive swing occurred on the above hand when it was dealt in a recent National Team of Four match.

The first round of bidding was the same at both tables when North responded with two no trump, announcing a minimum of 13 high card points. South was determined to reach slam inasmuch as his holding was worth 21 points.

One South chose to rebid his heart suit on the second round — suppressing the clubs — and when North offered a delayed raise he proceeded without further ado to six hearts.

A club was opened by West and when declarer learned of the unfavorable trump break he tried a finesse for the queen of spades. When this play lost he conceded defeat and East and West scored a 100 point profit on the deal.

At the other table, their teammates arrived at an ambitious grand slam contract in clubs with the North-South cards. Over North's two no trump response South chose to show his second suit by rebidding three clubs. When this received a raise to four South employed Blackwood to check for aces. His partner's response accounted for both missing controls and South proceeded resolutely to seven clubs choosing to adopt an optimistic attitude toward disposal of his third spade.

A trump was opened and won in the closed hand. A diamond was led to the ace and the jack was trumped with the ten of clubs. The queen of clubs was overtaken by the king so that South might ruff out the ten of diamonds. A spade to the ace permitted North to draw East's remaining club as South discarded the jack of spades.

Declarer now proceeded to establish his long heart by cashing the top three honors and then ruffing out West's jack. The last two tricks were taken by South's king of spades and the ten of hearts. The 2240 point profit registered by the declarer added to the 100 points which his teammates had chalked up at the other table was more than enough to decide the fate of the match.

Your Horoscope

By Frances Drake

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars, FOR THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1967.

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Always delighted with useful activity, you should be in your glory with all the good you can do and help others to do, on this active day. Start with the will, and don't let it falter. TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Harmony and self-control needed now. Don't antagonize those in a position to help you. Aim to improve systems, materials, knowledge.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — It's up to you to do all in your power to make this a satisfactory day. With Mercury encouraging active-mindedness and the acquisition of knowledge, you should do well.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Moon's present position suggests thoughtful decisions, studying all angles, pro and con. Cultivate concentration, emphasize patience.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — In minor matters, be as equally a shrewd and deliberate as in big ones, so that cogs will be in place and the wheel will turn as swiftly as it can on this auspicious day.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Mild influences. If you wish much of the day, you can so dictate. Whatever you do, remember the small courtesies and details so often forgotten when one is "getting ahead."

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — You may wish you were a bird, fly through others. So the Libran's innate sense of how to weigh things and keep them in balance will be required.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22) — You will not approve of some extremes being suggested. Speak up, voice your disapproval—but with logic. And remain calm! A fine opportunity to show your persuasive ness.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — You have so much going for you now that you can hardly complain of the day or its activities. This should be a period of REAL attainment.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Make the most of your fine mentality and use all talents to the best of your ability. A generally favorable day if YOU cooperate.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — If you are realistic, as you should be, you will take this day, with its fine values and opportunities—AND its annoyances—in your usual sensible manner. Some obstacles, many advantages.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — An excellent time in which to establish the basis for a more settled way of life. Plan all moves well and with future security in mind. Navigate your ships smartly.

YOU BORN TODAY are bright and, normally, a happy cheerful individual, with a real yen for living and giving all you have to the world. Aries natives are usually creators and good-will builders. You act with impelling force, too suddenly on occasion, which can result in confusion or even antagonism. You are a leading force, so take pains daily to make sure of your route and demeanor. Make provisions for emergencies, then they will not be surprising or distressing. Education is never wasted on the Aries; he or she yearns for it, seeks to broaden horizons, gets the finest from life. Birthdate of: Paul Verlaine, French poet.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

BREAST CANCER

Carrier of the breast strikes approximately 62,000 women annually. Of these, 53 per cent are cured via surgery. Many who failed to survive might have been saved thru early diagnosis. This is why we stress self-examination of the breasts, annual checkups, and the newer screening tests.

Hope is never abandoned, even tho' not all sufferers respond to surgery or radiation treatments after the breast cancer has progressed. In the palliative treatment of these malignancies that the chance of prolonging life, free of pain, is excellent. Procedures such as X-ray, cryosurgery, radioisotopes, and chemicals are used separately; when one begins to fail, another is prescribed.

X-ray or radium is used to stop the growth of recurrent tumors and deposits of cancer cells in the lymphatic glands. These techniques also help when the cancer invades the bones. Hormones also influence the growth of breast cancer. Tumors that develop prior to, during, or shortly after the menopause have been stimulated by the female sex hormones (estrogens) but can be neutralized with male hormones. The manufacture of additional estrogens can be reduced by removing the ovaries, adrenalectomy, or hypophysectomy (pituitary body).

Tumors that develop years after the menopause have formed in an estrogenic environment. Growth, in these instances, is encouraged by taking estrogens. The cortisone-type hormones lessen swelling and inflammation, and also affect the growth rate of the cells. Chemicals such as Cytosar and fluorouracil produce a regression of tumor deposits in the soft tissues of one-third of those with breast cancer. Radioisotopes also are used when the cancer cells spread to certain organs. Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request. TOMORROW: Colon Distress.

CHANGES IN ORGAN

F.R. writes: What is meant by an organic disease?

REPLY — One in which there are structural changes in an organ, as opposed to a functional disease in which performance may be disturbed even tho' the organ is sound. Organic heart changes occur in coronary thrombosis but palpitation may be a functional disturbance especially when the individual is overly concerned about his heart condition.

COLD WEATHER DISCOMFORT

Miss V. writes: My eyes water and my nose gets red when the weather turns cold. Have you any suggestions on preventing these nuisances?

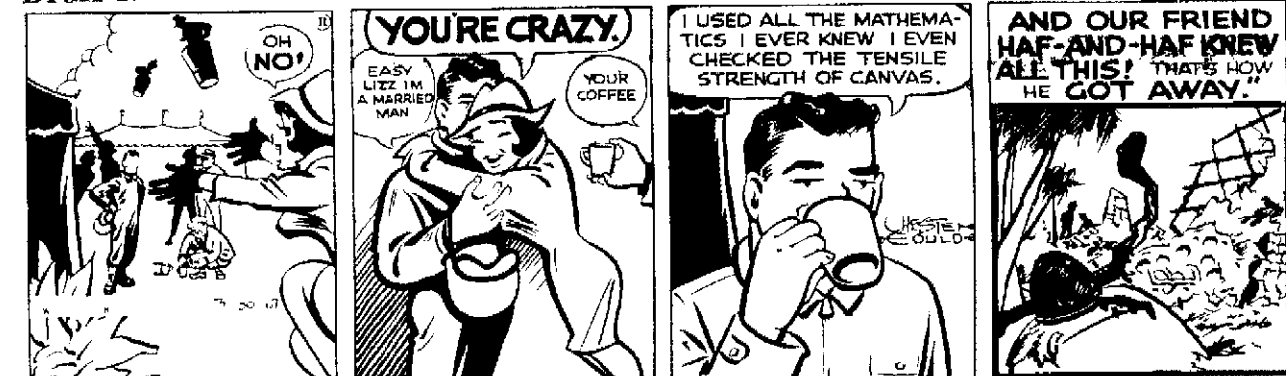

REPLY — Go south, young lady. There is no medicine or vaccine for these annoying conditions. The alternative to a warm climate is covering the lower face with a muffler or mask on going out of doors.

THE CORONARY VESSELS

Mrs. E. T. writes: Is coronary disease common?

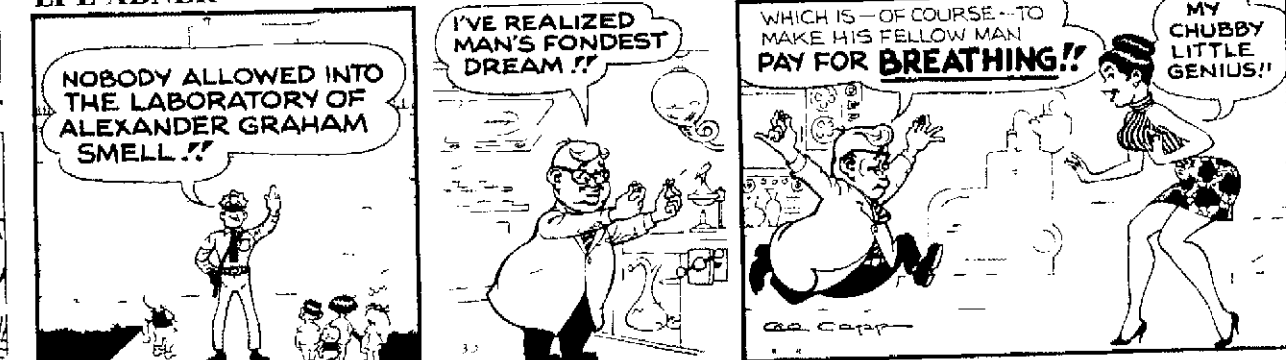

REPLY — Yes, especially after age 50. Involvement of the coronary arteries is the most prevalent cause of heart disease. These vessels supply the heart muscle with blood and are so vital many physicians look upon them as the Achilles' heel of modern man.

This Bernstein Writes Movie Music

By MARY CAMPBELL

Composer Elmer Bernstein, nominated eight times for Academy Awards, yet to be a winner, says, "You just hope and pray that if you win, it'll be for one of the things you really like."

This year, Bernstein wouldn't mind winning. He has three nominations—for the score of "Hawaii," the song "My Wishful Doll" from "Hawaii," and adapting the score for "Return of the Seven"—and he likes them all. For "Return of the Seven" he was adapting his own music, written for the earlier film, "The Magnificent Seven."

Bernstein, pronounced Bernstein, likes a compliment given his "Hawaii" score by Hawaiian singer Don Ho: "It gives me the same feeling that I imagine Jewish people get from hearing 'Exodus.'"

The composer likes that because he feels it means he solved his biggest problem with "Hawaii." In his research he was startled to find that in the early 19th Century there were no Hawaiian folk songs—therefore no authentic themes to use as a basis for his score. He found only rhythm instruments, unaccompanied vocal chants using two or three notes and ceremonial rituals for weddings and funerals.

"So I finally went for my impression of the feeling that the islands generate. I contrasted that against the harder atmosphere of the arriving New England missionaries."

Even there, Bernstein had a problem. There are hymn tunes from the period for the missionaries, Bernstein says, "But what about the love relationship between the missionary and his wife? He was a cold kind of person. Obviously I couldn't write what we would ordinarily respond to as love music. I had to find a cooler, archaic way to express it in this instance."

When "The Magnificent Seven" film came out, Bernstein was disappointed that no soundtrack record album was issued. There is one of "Return of the

"The Man with the Golden Arm" was the real milestone. Bernstein became a known composer through doing its score and the music was a much-discussed soundtrack innovation, being heavily jazz.

Bernstein says, "It was disarmingly easy to sell Otto Preminger on jazz. Of course none of us realized it was quite as revolutionary as it turned out to be. I read the script and told him we ought to have a jazz-oriented score. He said, 'That is your problem. Go home and work it out.'"

Preminger likes to get a composer when he is young, and he never uses the same composer twice. He tells me now I'm too rich and fat."

The same year, 1955, that he wrote the music for "The Man with the Golden Arm," Bernstein also wrote "The Ten Commandments" soundtrack.

He says, "Victor Young was supposed to do it but he was in New York writing a musical. I was hired to write dance music here and there, on what may be the shortest contract in the history of modern pictures—one week."

"DeMille was tough and they didn't think I'd last any longer. I stayed on a week-to-week basis for 14 months. When they knew Victor wasn't going to make it back in time, the head of the department fought for me to write the music."

"DeMille finally asked if I would try some themes. It was a test but I felt it was legitimate. I was unknown. I devised themes for the main characters and he listened and posed problems like how would I handle the Moses theme when he is a baby. I improvised for him right then on the piano. Finally he said, 'Do you think you could stand me for another six months?'

"He was very tough, but I never felt it was unkind. I think DeMille was the most interesting man I ever met in Hollywood."

Bernstein, who is 44 and looks younger, says the importance of a movie title song was discovered with "High Noon."

"It has become apparent that songs made out of themes can be important to the exploitation of the picture. So there are demands on us these days to look for the hit songs, but ordinarily I don't aim for a song. A composer has to keep in mind that the important thing he is being called upon to do is to provide a score for the picture."

There have been only a couple of records made from Bernstein-written title songs, Glenn Yarbrough's "Baby the Rain Must Fall" and Brook Benton's "Walk on the Wild Side."

Now, however, Bernstein is in New York writing his first Broadway show—and that's all songs.

ELMER BERNSTEIN

Seven." Another failure to release a soundtrack album from a movie, which disappointed him, was "The World of Henry Orient."

Of the some 60 to 70 film scores that he has composed, Bernstein says, "To Kill A Mockingbird" is possibly my most favorite. But I feel very strongly about "The Man with the Golden Arm" and "The Magnificent Seven."

Misfit Girl, Proper Teacher Illustrate Relationships

CECILY, By Isabelle Holland, Lippincott, $3.95.
Cecily's story is set in 1934, at an English boarding school. Cecily is the sort of misfit, awkward 13-year-old one might find in a great many times and places, so the setting really becomes universal.
She is uncertain of herself, and she has an over-eager desire to be liked, coupled with a negative talent for saying or doing the wrong thing at just the right time. Consequently, her teachers are hard-pressed to sympathize with her when she compounds a glaring error with fresher blunders.

She also is a natural victim of the other girls at the school, who quickly have discovered that in the cruel pecking order of childhood and early adolescence, she is helpless against all of them.
But this is more than a story of a hapless little girl. It is about a young teacher, too — Elizabeth Marks, who wouldn't be considered a misfit at all. She is the bright, very young schoolmistress, who happens to be engaged to Tim Nichols, an American scholar teaching for a year at a nearby boys' school.

In a way, there is a parallel between hapless Cecily and Elizabeth, whose dogged dedication to discipline, British sportsmanship and rigid correctness has smothered her feelings of tolerance and kindness. She has a great difficulty in concealing her dislike for poor Cecily; she seems trapped by circumstances into being patently unfair to the child. In her way, Cecily is flawed; in a different way Elizabeth is flawed, too. There is poignancy in the fact that Tim is a witness to his fiancée's flaws.

This is a story of delicate relationships, human feelings and psychological tensions. It happens to be a first novel, but its delineation is thoroughly skilled. It is a sensitive story of the nuances of human emotion.

Fiesta in Seville. Carnival in Rio. Festival time in the small tropical islands windward in the Caribbean. Spring's the time for celebration—and celebration foods—around the world. Your own personal fiesta might welcome a favorite son home from college for the spring vacation. Or celebrate a husband's promotion. Or greet good friends, long absent from your home. Whether a family dinner or an evening get-together, a celebration cake will make it a memorable event. And since it's an important cake, you'll want to use cake flour. Bring out the best china, shine up the silverware, splurge a bit on fresh flowers. Cut generous slices of the Fiesta Banana Cake, a moist flavorful cake filled and frosted with whipped topping.

FIESTA BANANA CAKE
2 cups sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon double-acting baking powder
1 teaspoon soda
¾ teaspoon salt
1 ½ cups sugar
½ cup shortening, at room temperature
½ cup sour milk or buttermilk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup mashed ripe bananas
2 eggs
½ cup coarsely chopped nuts
1 envelope whipped topping mix
1 banana, sliced
Chopped maraschino cherries

Sift flour with baking powder, soda, salt, and sugar.
Stir shortening just to soften.
Sift in flour mixture. Add ¼ cup of the milk, vanilla, and the mashed bananas and mix until all flour is dampened. Then beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer or 300 vigorous strokes by hand. Add eggs, nuts, and remaining milk. Beat 1 minute longer in mixer or 150 strokes by hand.

Pour batter into two 8- or 9-inch layer pans, which have been lined on bottoms with paper. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes for 9-inch layers and 35 to 40 minutes for 8-inch layers. Cool 10 minutes in pans; then remove from pans and cool on racks.

Prepare whipped topping mix as directed on package; spread between layers and over top of cake. Garnish with banana slices and chopped cherries.
NOTE: This cake may also be baked in a 13½x9-inch pan at 375 degrees for 30 minutes.

SPONGE CAKE
3 (1/3 cup) egg whites
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup sifted cake flour
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon double-acting baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 (¼ cup) egg yolks
2 tablespoons water
½ teaspoon lemon extract

Combine egg whites and cream of tartar in large bowl. Beat until soft mounds begin to form. (Beat at high speed of electric mixer or use rotary beater or flat wire whip.) Add ¼ cup sugar gradually, by sprinkling 2 tablespoons at a time over whites, and continuing to beat until very stiff peaks are formed. Do not underbeat. Sift flour, ½ cup sugar, the baking powder, and salt into small bowl. Add egg yolks, water, and lemon extract; beat with a spoon just until blended—about 75 strokes.

Fold egg yolk mixture carefully into stiffly beaten egg whites, using about 30 fold-over strokes. (To fold, cut down through mixture with a large spoon, flat wire whip, or rubber scraper, lift up, and fold over. Do not stir or beat.) Pour batter into ungreased 9x5-inch loaf pan. Cut gently through batter to remove large air bubbles. Bake at 350 degrees for about 35 minutes, or until cake springs back when pressed lightly with finger. Remove from oven. Cool cake in pan, upside down for 1 to 2 hours. Then loosen from sides with knife and gently remove cake. Serve plain, sprinkled with confectioners' sugar, or glazed as desired.

NOTE: This cake may also be baked in an ungreased 8-inch square pan for about 30 to 35 minutes. Cool cake upside down in pan.

Lions to Give Glaucoma Tests at Sports Show mittee is sponsoring free screening tests for the detection of glaucoma Saturday and Sunday at the Kiwanis Sports Show at Warren Area High School.

Testing hours are from 5 to 10 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 8 p.m. Sunday.

Arthur B. Calabrese, MD, ophthalmologist from Erie, will direct the tests through the cooperation of Region III of the Pennsylvania Dept. of Health and with the approval of the Warren County Medical Society.

Glaucoma is a major cause of blindness in the United States. Anyone of any age can have it. It may develop in children or young adults. However, 95 per cent of its victims are past 40. Glaucoma is becoming more common because the number of older people in the country is increasing.

Early detection and prompt treatment can control glaucoma and prevent needless blindness. The Lions Club booth at the Sport Show will display the equipment used in the Eye-Donor program. This serves as an opportunity for a person to donate his eyes at death which are used to restore sight through corneal transplants.

The Blind Seal program will also be displayed to show the public how the purchase of Lion Blind Seals helps to supply glasses for needy school children and others.

Barnes News

By HELEN L. ROBERTS

The Warren County Bookmobile visits Barnes next on April 12 from 5:15 to 5:30 p.m.

The local WSCS members of Methodist Church will be guests of Sheffield WSCS Tuesday afternoon April 4 at the Sheffield Church.

Mrs. J. B. Lyle and Mrs. Janet Mumford are patients in Warren General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Curtin and daughter, Pam, of Pittsburgh were weekend guests of Mrs. J. C. Curtin. Other recent guests at the Curtin home were Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Myers and family of Randolph, N.Y.

During the Good Friday services held at the Sheffield First Methodist Church, a Barnes quartet with Mrs. David Swanson, Mrs. Ray Blymiller, Mrs. Carl Litchberger and Mrs. Francis Peterson sang "On a Rugged Hill." Soloist Mrs. Fred Rounds sang "He Carried the Cross for Me" and Karen Weigel, also of Barnes, sang in a girl ensemble.

Attorney David Swanson was guest speaker at the annual Sunrise Service sponsored by the Senior High Youth Sunday morning.

Mrs. Gladys Schaffer, with her daughter, Mrs. Larry Copley and family have moved to Barnes, having purchased the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Onufer. The Onufers have moved to the William Hoffman home in Sheffield.

Miss Vera Schuler with Sheila and Greg Schuler spent the Easter weekend in Washington, D.C.

The Omega Class of the Methodist Church meets Thursday evening (March 30) with Mrs. Frank Lyle.

CANCER MONTH PROCLAIMED

Gov. Raymond P. Shafer is shown here signing the proclamation setting aside April as Cancer Control month. Watching him place his signature on the document is Ray Calabrese, Nescopek, 1967 Crusade chairman for the Pennsylvania Division, American Cancer Society.

Shafer Proclaims Cancer Month

Pennsylvania's Governor and his family are especially conscious of cancer's warning signals, Gov. Raymond P. Shafer said, in signing this year's proclamation setting aside April as Cancer Control Month.

"I hope everyone will follow our example and post the sticker with the warning signals in a conspicuous place, so that they will be constantly reminded of the need for alertness for any possible sign of cancer," Gov. Shafer said.

The Governor said he hopes Pennsylvanians will respond generously during April when the Crusade volunteers begin their canvassing for the American Cancer Society's annual fund drive.

"They'll be giving information — vital, life-saving information — in addition to requesting contributions," Gov. Shafer noted. "The small slip of paper they will distribute could save a life or many lives."

"Pennsylvanians should be aware of this, and will, I hope, cooperate to the fullest with the goal of eradicating this scourge."

The Governor said his own, personal touch with cancer started when his mother contracted the disease.

"There is no way to explain my feelings, except to say that I wholeheartedly want to see the day when no one has to suffer from cancer — when it has been dealt a blow that will make it impossible for anyone to ever get cancer again," he said. The goal for this year's drive in Pennsylvania is $2,000,000 that will be used in research, public and professional education, and service to cancer patients.

Ray Calabrese, of Nescopek, who witnessed the Governor's signing of the proclamation, and who suffered an attack of cancer himself in 1965, emphasized the importance of early detection in the individual's conquering of cancer.

"All our volunteers will distribute the small slip of paper that might mean the difference between life and death for the family receiving this information," he stated.

The paper shows the seven warning signals of cancer, and is so designed that the smaller portion with the signals can be detached and posted in the medicine cabinet, for example, as a constant reminder to watch for these signs and immediately go to a physician for a checkup.

Stamps In The News

AP Newsfeatures

By SYD KRONISH

Fifty-five nations have achieved independence since the founding of the United Nations in 1945. As a tribute to these newly independent countries, the U. N. Postal Administration has issued a new stamp in two denominations, 5 cents and 11 cents.

The design of the new U. N. stamp features a fireworks display, the traditional way of celebrating independence. Also on the stamp are the U. N. seal and the word "Independence" in a semicircle around the seal. The date "1967" appears beneath. The 5-cent is blue, yellow, pink and green. The 11-cent stamp is red, yellow, pink and green.

Also issued by the U. N. Postal Administration is a new 1½-cent regular stamp which replaces the one originally issued in 1951. The design shows the United Nations buildings in

New York superimposed over a world globe, with the words "United Nations" in English and French.

Four additional U. S. commemorative postage stamps for 1967 have been announced by Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien. The new stamps are:

1. Twin issues saluting U.S. accomplishments in space and looking forward to future peaceful conquests in the outer frontiers. There will be two separate designs.

2. An "urban planning" stamp pointing to the need for federal, state and city cooperation to halt the decay of cities. The issuance date will coincide with the 50th anniversary of the American Institute of Planners.

3. A "search for peace" stamp honoring the theme of the 50th anniversary of Lions International. It will be issued during the Lions International convention in Chicago in July.

4. A new commemorative halling the 50th anniversary of the independence of Finland.

The four new stamps will bring the total number of commemorative stamps in the 1967 program to 14. Details and first-day information will be reported soon.

CLERGY SHORTAGE

LONDON (AP) — The Church of England faces a shortage of about 3,000 clergymen by the end of 1968, its yearbook reports.

Snow Covered Stolen Signs

CORRY — When winter's last accumulation of snow melted along Airport rd, it bared what must have been a field day for a sign stealer.

Police Chief Frank Carnegie said Monday he had been guided to the site along the road by Keith Plants, city streets dept. foreman, where he was shown a pile of signs ranging from privately owned "no trespassing" signs to state directional signs and a curve warning sign.

Included in the pile thrown along the road, Carnegie said, are seven white metal no trespassing signs on metal posts, a large yellow highway marker sign indicating a curve and three state directional signs reading "Sparta 7 Miles," "Corry 7 Miles" and "Spring Creek 4 Miles."

The chief said there was no indication how long the signs had been lying at the site.

MEMBER SLUMP

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ) report that membership has dropped to 1,903,395, down 23,985 from the total a year ago.
